THE WORLD OF WOMEN

You'll Find This Difficult, But Keep Right At It!

The cross-legged roll perfected... toes on floor over head.

By Jac Auer

You have been working on your thighs and hips, now you are ready for advanced stretching exercises.

Since you want a slender, supple form, you must work on your hips, thighs, abdomen and also on your spine and neck. This exercise gets at all of them.

Now roll back on your spine, at the same time pulling your legs up and stretching them over your head, toward the floor. Your objective is to have your feet touch the floor over your head, with your hands still holding onto them.

When you have touched the floor, or come as near to it as you can, the first time, hold it a second or two. Then bring your feet back, still holding on; and you will come to a sitting position again, hands still on feet, right where you started.

This exercise does more to break down the fat on your abdomen, your thighs and the back of your neck than any other exercise given. It is a composite of many exercises and gets right after muscles that need stretching, working on your back that needs limbering, and generally is simply fine for toning up your circulation and system.

Don't despair if you can't touch the floor the first day. Few women can who haven't done the exercise before. But keep at it. The distance you make each day toward your goal is a measure in itself of your decrease in fat and increase in liness. Keep at it.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Allela Hart.

Blemishes and blackheads are ugly words. But if you have them you may as well face the facts and then begin treatments to remedy the condition.

Blackheads, compared to pimples, blemishes or worse yet, acne, are fairly simple to deal with. Good plain soap and water used in conjunction with a rough wash cloth or a complexion brush goes far toward eliminating blackheads. As you probably know, large pores are the root of the evil. Dirt gets into them and causes blackheads. It is always necessary to know the cause if you are to get a satisfactory result from anything which has to do with the complexion.

First of all, wash your face briskly with a soapy wash cloth. Second, rinse it with hot water or apply steaming towels. Now place a piece of soft gauze over your index fingers and gently press out all the blackheads which come out easily. Rinse your face in ice water; rub on an astringent to close the pores and consider yourself well on the way to ridance of blackheads. Repeat this treatment every other night.

Never squeeze your face too vigorously. You are apt to injure the delicate tissues of the skin and leave permanent blemishes.

Pimples should be opened, after the same cleaning process as above, with a sterilized needle and then an antiseptic applied to them. If they persist in coming back see a doctor.

Your diet has a great deal to do with a beautiful, clear skin. Drink ten glasses of water a day, eat no fats or rich desserts, and see that you have plenty of fresh vegetables at least once a day.

APPETIZERS.

An important hotel has a real ideal which you can carry out when serving meals in your own home. Instead of a wisp of salad with a meal they put three or four dishes of appetizers on the table before the first course is served leaving them on until you are ready for dessert. One dish may contain pickles, another cottage cheese, while a third and fourth have jelly, olives, celery or anything else you have in the way of an appetizer.

YOUR CHILDREN.

Young Mothers—Neglectful?

By Oliver Roberts Barton

I like young parents. When I see a young woman wheeling a baby, looking more like his sister than his mother it warms my heart. Youth is the time to have families. And incidentally this depression is ruining the chances of our next generation of babies to have just such young parents, for marriage has been next to impossible for young people.

Not only that but there has been no money for Mary, 20, wedded to John, 23, to have any babies yet. However not all Marys nor Johns have waited. I see a number of these girl-mothers about.

Yet is a queer way nature has sometimes of producing her young. She puts her babies into the arms of mothers so young that they have not yet learned the word caution.

Babies "Take" a Lot

Perhaps it is best so. If mothers worried about everything the way grandmothers do they would be nervous wrecks. Little children would be even more hampered and inhibited than they are and the race would soon lose its spirit of adventure and enterprise.

Yet I believe the young mother is too prone to take her baby's safety too much for granted. She wants to see a movie and off she goes, baby too, to see John Barrymore push Lionel under the ice. She wants to shop, so baby goes along to pass on whether a blue serge suit or a gray fur-trimmed coat is more becoming to Mamma.

She has the crowd in and baby is up all evening, first on one lap and then another, enjoying the vicarious smokes of a hundred cigarettes and rumpling the cards in the dummy just when the player is deciding on a finesse.

Treated So Casually!

The little creature is taken so for granted, like a new puppy, or a knitting bag! He is just part and parcel of life to be trotted along everywhere and treated as casually as a basket of groceries.

It amuses me but it terrifies me. The strange part of it is that babies so treated are as good as gold mostly.

I believed that most of these little tykes are fed pretty regularly, because one thing that has sunk in of all the baby knowledge spread about, is the importance of right and regular feeding. And the chances are that although they may not sleep until midnight, they will see to it themselves that they get in some twelve to fifteen hours solid slumber out of the twenty-four.

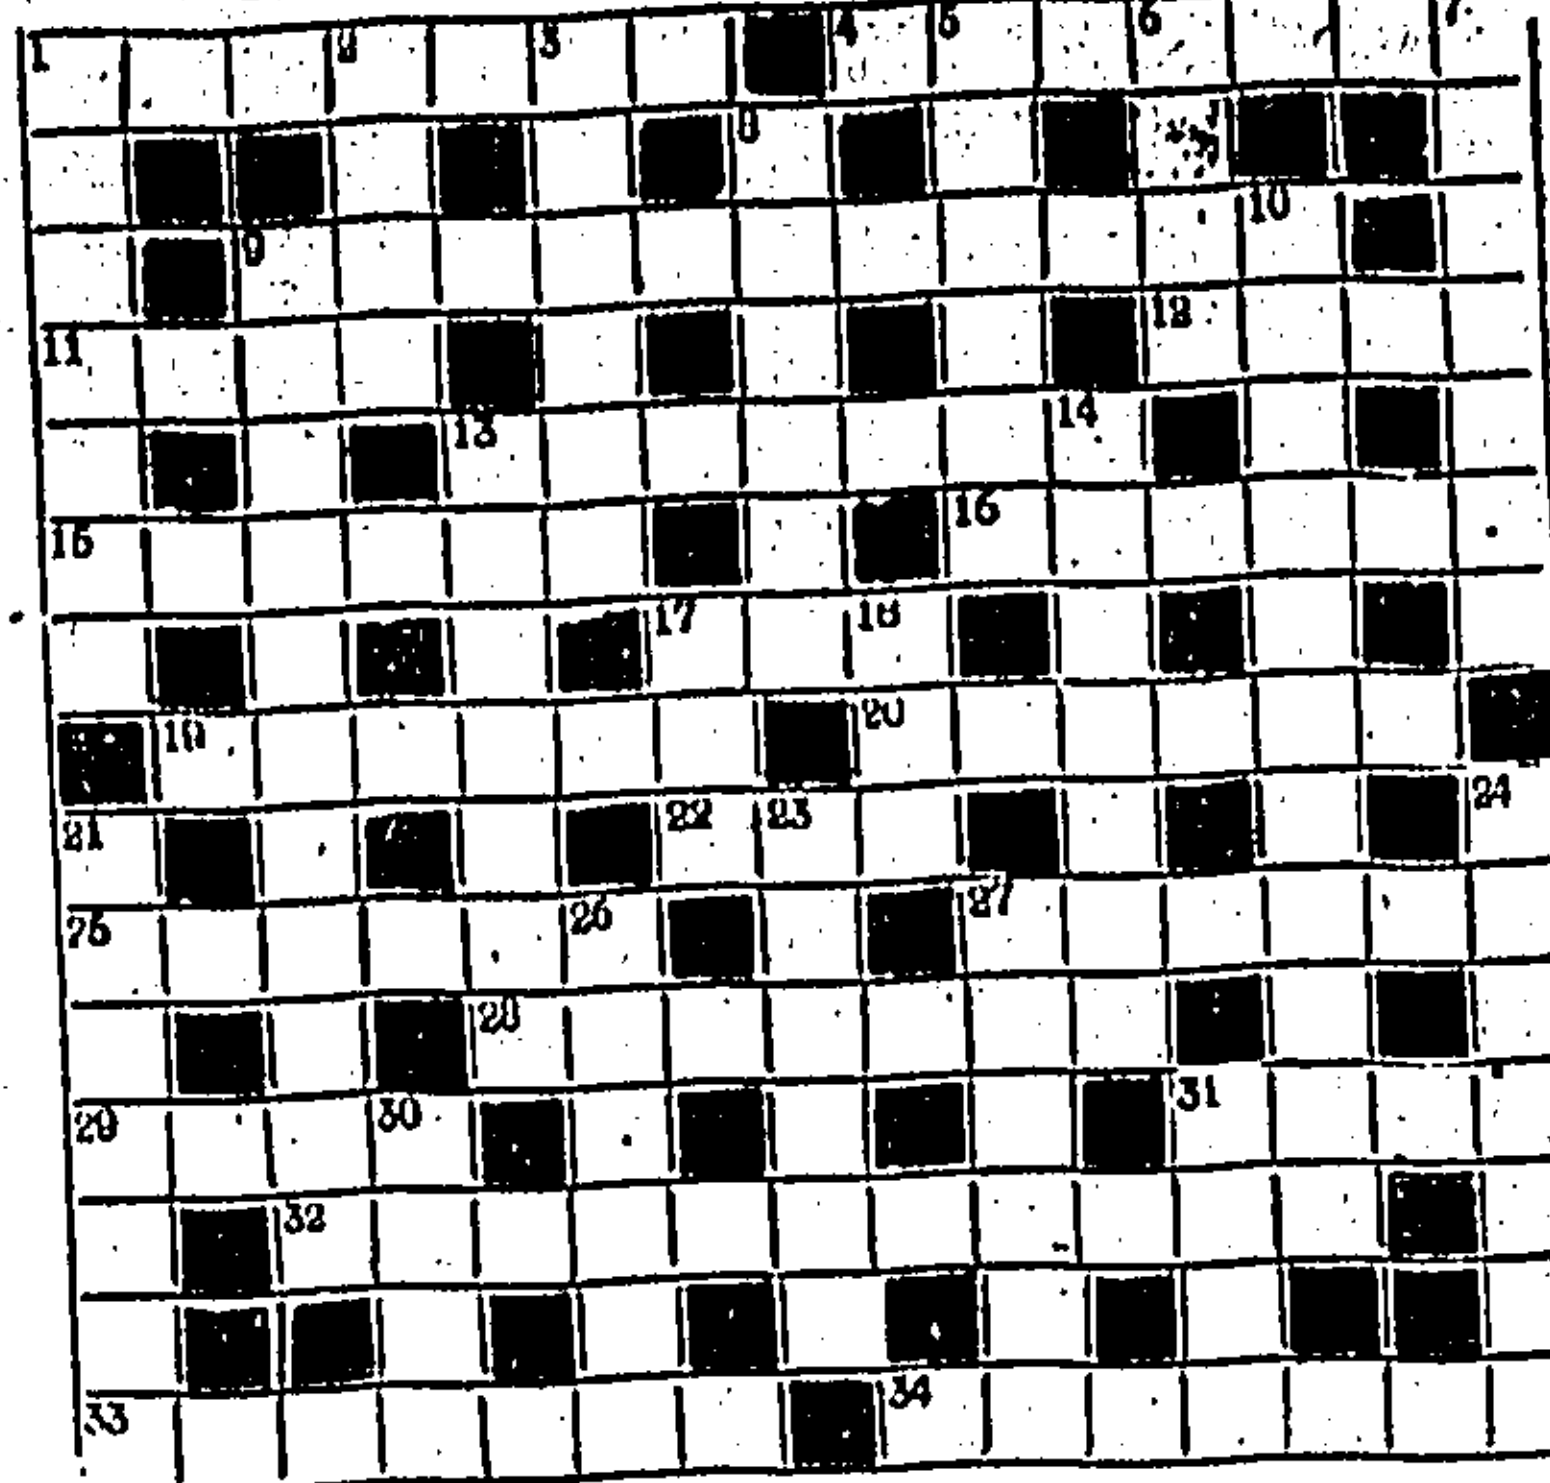

But Not Neglected.

Please do not mistake me. I do not imply that the average baby of the very young mother is neglected. He is usually as clean as a daisy and bathed well. His bath may be at any odd hour his mother can squeeze it in, but he's bathed just the same and kept happy and comfortable.

I do not mean either that all young mothers are casual. Many lean over backwards to see that their babies are "scientifically raised."

This, after all, is merely a comment without either a suggestion or criticism. We cannot change youth. It is always assertive, always acquisitive. When a baby appears in the picture, much as he is loved, he is not permitted to shut out the world, that is all.

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONNIE O'DARE, who is in love with DAN CARDIAN, local heir to a fortune, believes she is losing him to SANDRA LAW, RENOL, supposed to be her friend. In spite of the attentions of CATHARINE EUSTACE, handsome newcomer, Monnie continues to pine for Dan. After neglecting her for sometime Dan again seems interested. At a big party which Sandra gives Dan is missing. There is a scene between Sandra and JETTY, her maid, who believes Sandra is "sampling" JAMES, the chauffeur.

CHAPTER XIX

"Oh, Mrs. Briggs! Mother's out in the yard. She's peeling peaches for jam."

The tall woman swished her way through the neat hall, with its oak stand harbouring three or four discouraged looking umbrellas. She passed through the kitchen, a critical view of the white shelves covered in blue oilcloth. Then out to the porch.

"Mrs. O'Dare! Oh, there you are. Just ran in for a minute."

The woman under the maple tree, swaying back and forth gently in the old rocker, looked up and smiled at the newcomer.

"Sit down—do!" She indicated a battered basket chair at her side. "Isn't it hot? I thought I'd do a bit of preserving. Doesn't seem to matter how hot it gets—I always feel the urge, long about this time."

"You have got energy!" The speaker eyed her hostess discontentedly. "I'm all tuckered out myself. Walking by from town, I just thought I'd come in and have a bit of gossip."

"I'm glad you did," Mrs. O'Dare said cordially, pushing aside a wooden bowl of parings and rising. "Just sit here in the shade a minute while I put these things on the stove. Then I'm all through. I'll bring out something cool to drink."

Her guest's half-hearted protest followed her into the shaded kitchen where, with a thoughtful frown, she consigned the ripe golden fruit to a blue enamel kettle, setting it over a low flame.

"What's that old hell-cat want?" She looked up, her hand at her heart, to see her young son, attired now in bathing suit and dirty white slacks, signalling her from the doorway.

"Mark, you scared me. Don't talk that way."

"Well, she is that, isn't she? Always snooping into somebody's business."

Mrs. O'Dare shook her head reprovingly at him.

"I'm going down to the river with the kids, Mom. Be back about 6."

"Be careful, son."

He gave her a peck on the cheek and she heard him whistling down the path. Then she turned her attention to the cooling drink she had promised her visitor. Lemons were brought from the ice box and presently from green glasses a tinkling tune sounded.

"My, that tastes good!"

Laura Briggs put her head back, sighing gustily. There were two parentheses etched at either side of her thin-lipped mouth. Her black hair was drawn back from a face which must, in its time, have been lovely, but which now bore the marks of illness and discontent.

"You oughtn't to go walking in the sun like that," said the gentle voice of the woman in blue gingham.

"It's bad for you."

"I know. I know," Laura Briggs was impatient. "But it's Rissy—I had to get the stuff for a dress she wants to wear Friday night, and she's at me all the time. Will couldn't drive me. He had to go up to the city."

She paused and her listener waited for the declaration which was sure to come. Laura Briggs never came to call unless she desired to unburden herself.

"How're all your folks?" the caller wanted to know.

Mrs. O'Dare put back a strand of curling hair before she answered. She was a pretty little woman, an older replica of Monica.

"They're fine," she assured Laura Briggs. "They're just splendid. How's Rissy?"

But it was plain the other had not come to discuss her daughter. Mark reflected his mother, had been right. Laura had something on her mind. Well, whatever it was, she would hear it soon. She rocked to and fro, waiting.

"What's this we hear about Bill getting married?" demanded the newcomer with an arch smile.

"You're such a deep one, we never hear the real news from you."

The woman in the rocker showed no sign that the blow struck home. Her expression was still admirably placid, undisturbed.

"Well, you know Bill," she said lightly. "He's always had a lot of girls—but he's never really been serious. You don't mean Gertrude, do you?"

Mrs. Briggs sniffed disdainfully. Of course, she said, she didn't mean Gertrude. No, it was the other, that blonde from the Sweete Shoppe. Didn't Bill's mother know Bill's girl?

"I've met—such a lot of them," protested Mrs. O'Dare, pretending to brush away a cobweb, avoiding the sharp eyes of the other woman.

"I can't remember them all."

"Somehow," said Laura Briggs acidly, "I don't believe Bill's ever brought her to the house. You see," she paused to give her arrow its full flight, "you see, this one's married."

"M-married!" Edith O'Dare stammered over this. Then she was angry. She had always tried to see the best in Laura Briggs, had stood up for her when everybody else was furious at her, but this was really too much. Her Bill—and a married woman!

Coldly she said, "I think you must be mistaken. I'm sure you small, flashing guardian of her home, an angry hen brooding over her maligned chicks. She waited, withdrawn and a bit disdainful, for her caller to make her adieux.

This Laura Briggs did rather badly. She was chagrined at the effect her news had made. What she had expected, she could not say. Tears, perhaps. Harsh words for the errant son, curiosity about the charmer, the blond siren. None of these would Mrs. O'Dare accord her. Crestfallen, she withdrew.

Left alone, the little mother stormed inwardly. Not that she believed there was a word of truth in the fantastic story, she assured herself angrily. And yet—and yet Bill had been spending a great amount of time away from home these days. His absences had been unexplained. Gertrude Hampstead had been very cool to Mrs. O'Dare whenever they had met; had, in fact, looked the other way, pretending not to see.

Bill—her boy—involved with a married woman! She groaned.

Suddenly she felt a little sick and faint. The heat of the day, the work she had been doing, and the blow she had just received, combined to defeat her. She was leaning against the door frame, looking white and ill, when Kay breezed in.

"Mums! What on earth's the matter?"

"It's nothing—I just—"

She put up her hand to her eyes, staggering in the bright kitchen.

Kay was thoroughly frightened. "Let me get you some water. Here, lie down on the sofa! That's better!" Kay's face was sober now. She looked serious, responsible.

"I'm all right." Her mother sat up, setting her mouth firmly.

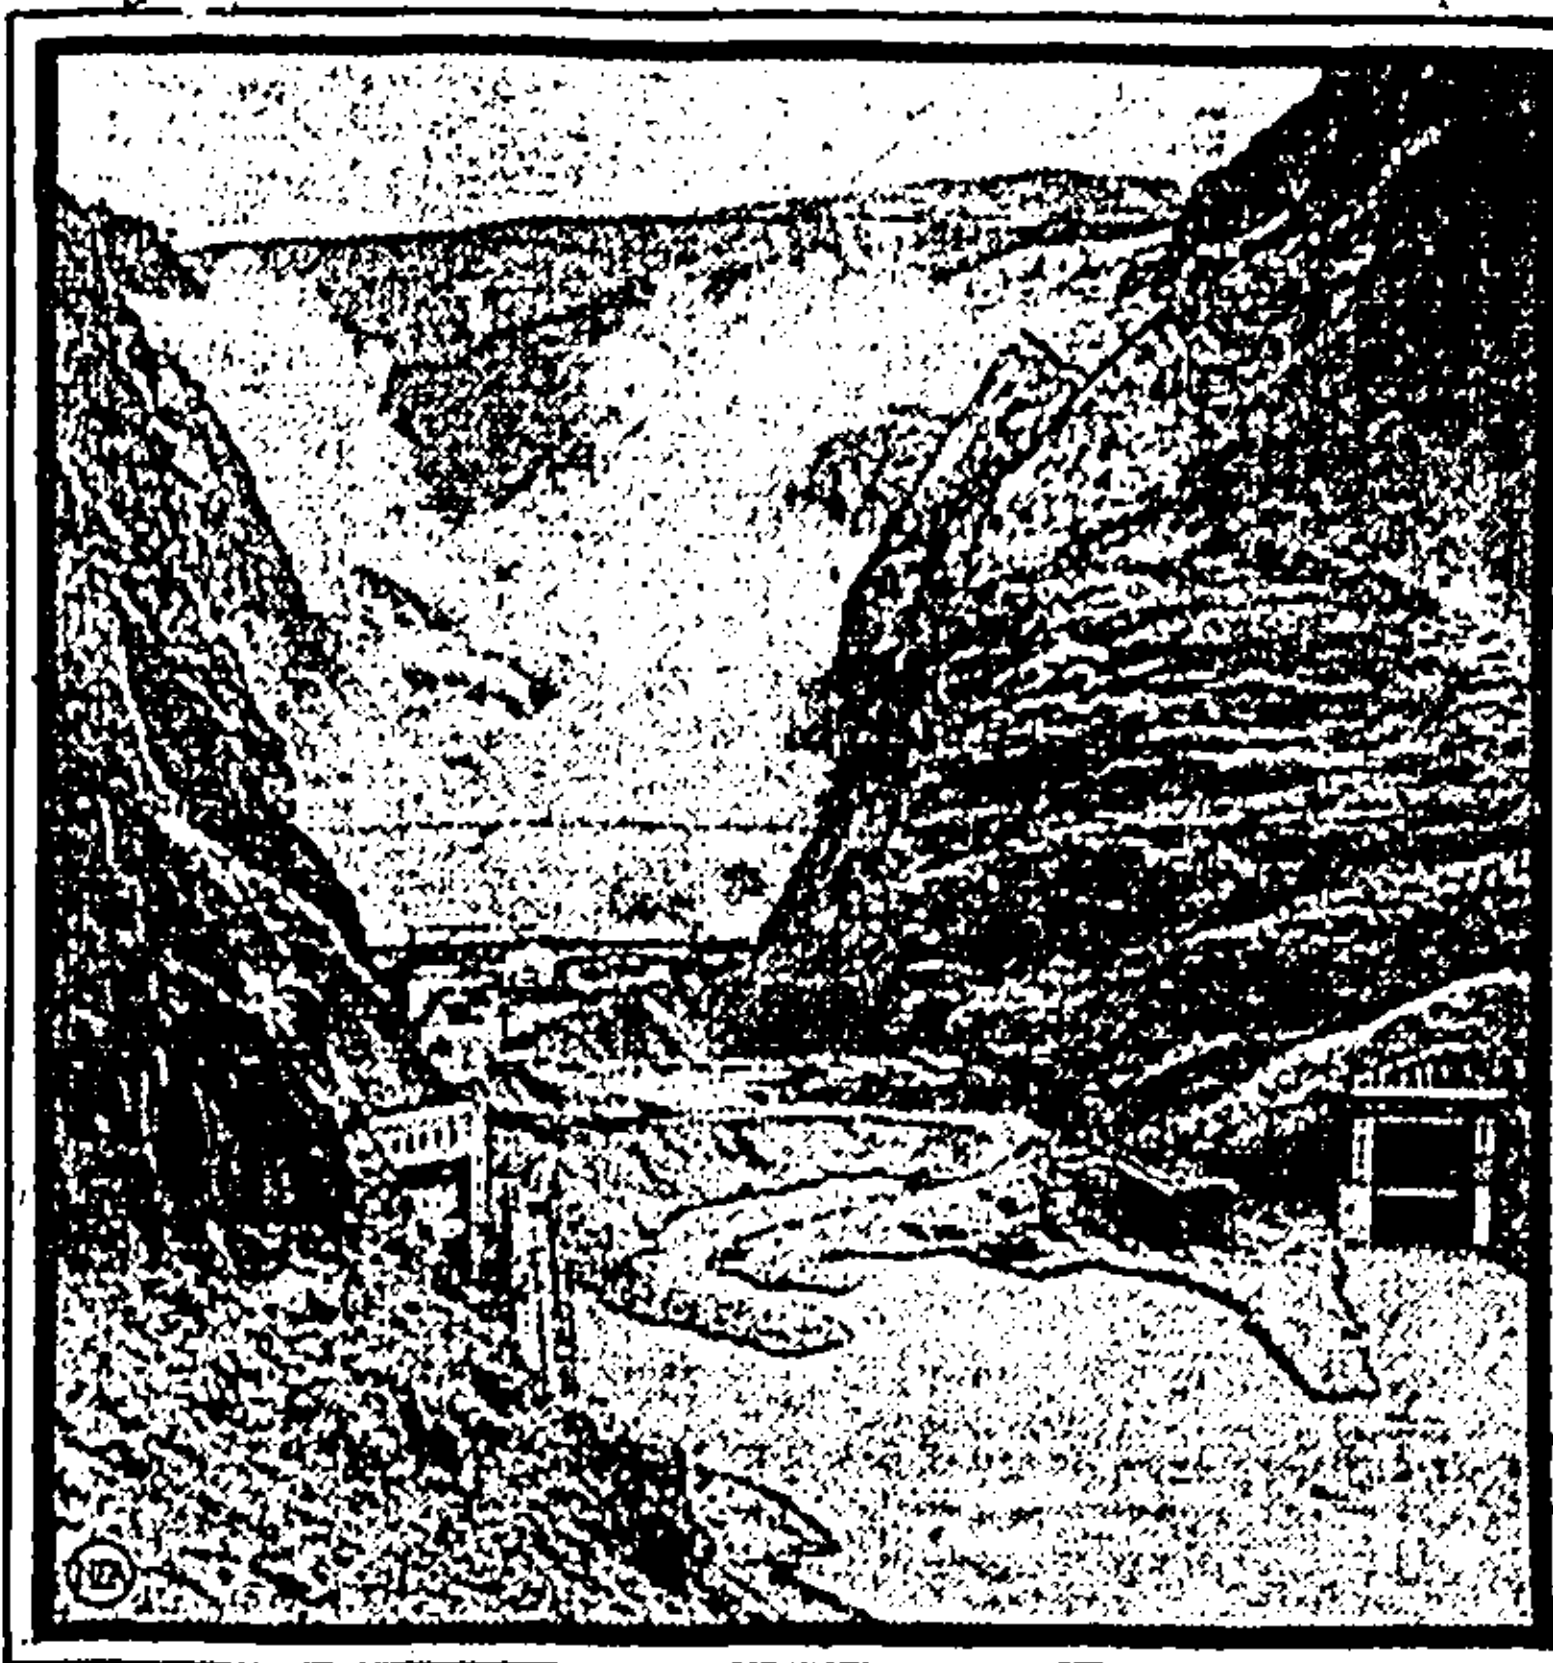

"It's only—tell me this, Kay. Is there any truth in the story about Bill and some married woman?"

"Oh, gosh!" Kay groaned, turning away. "Who told you?"

"I don't like being kept in the dark this way," protested the mother. "You all know—everybody in town knows, apparently—and only I am left out."

Four tons of dynamite blasted away a mountain of dirt and rock, marking the last "big shot" before actual construction of Boulder Dam begins. The picture was taken as thousands of tons of rock fell into the Colorado river canyon. In the foreground may be seen the tunnels through which the river's flow has been diverted.

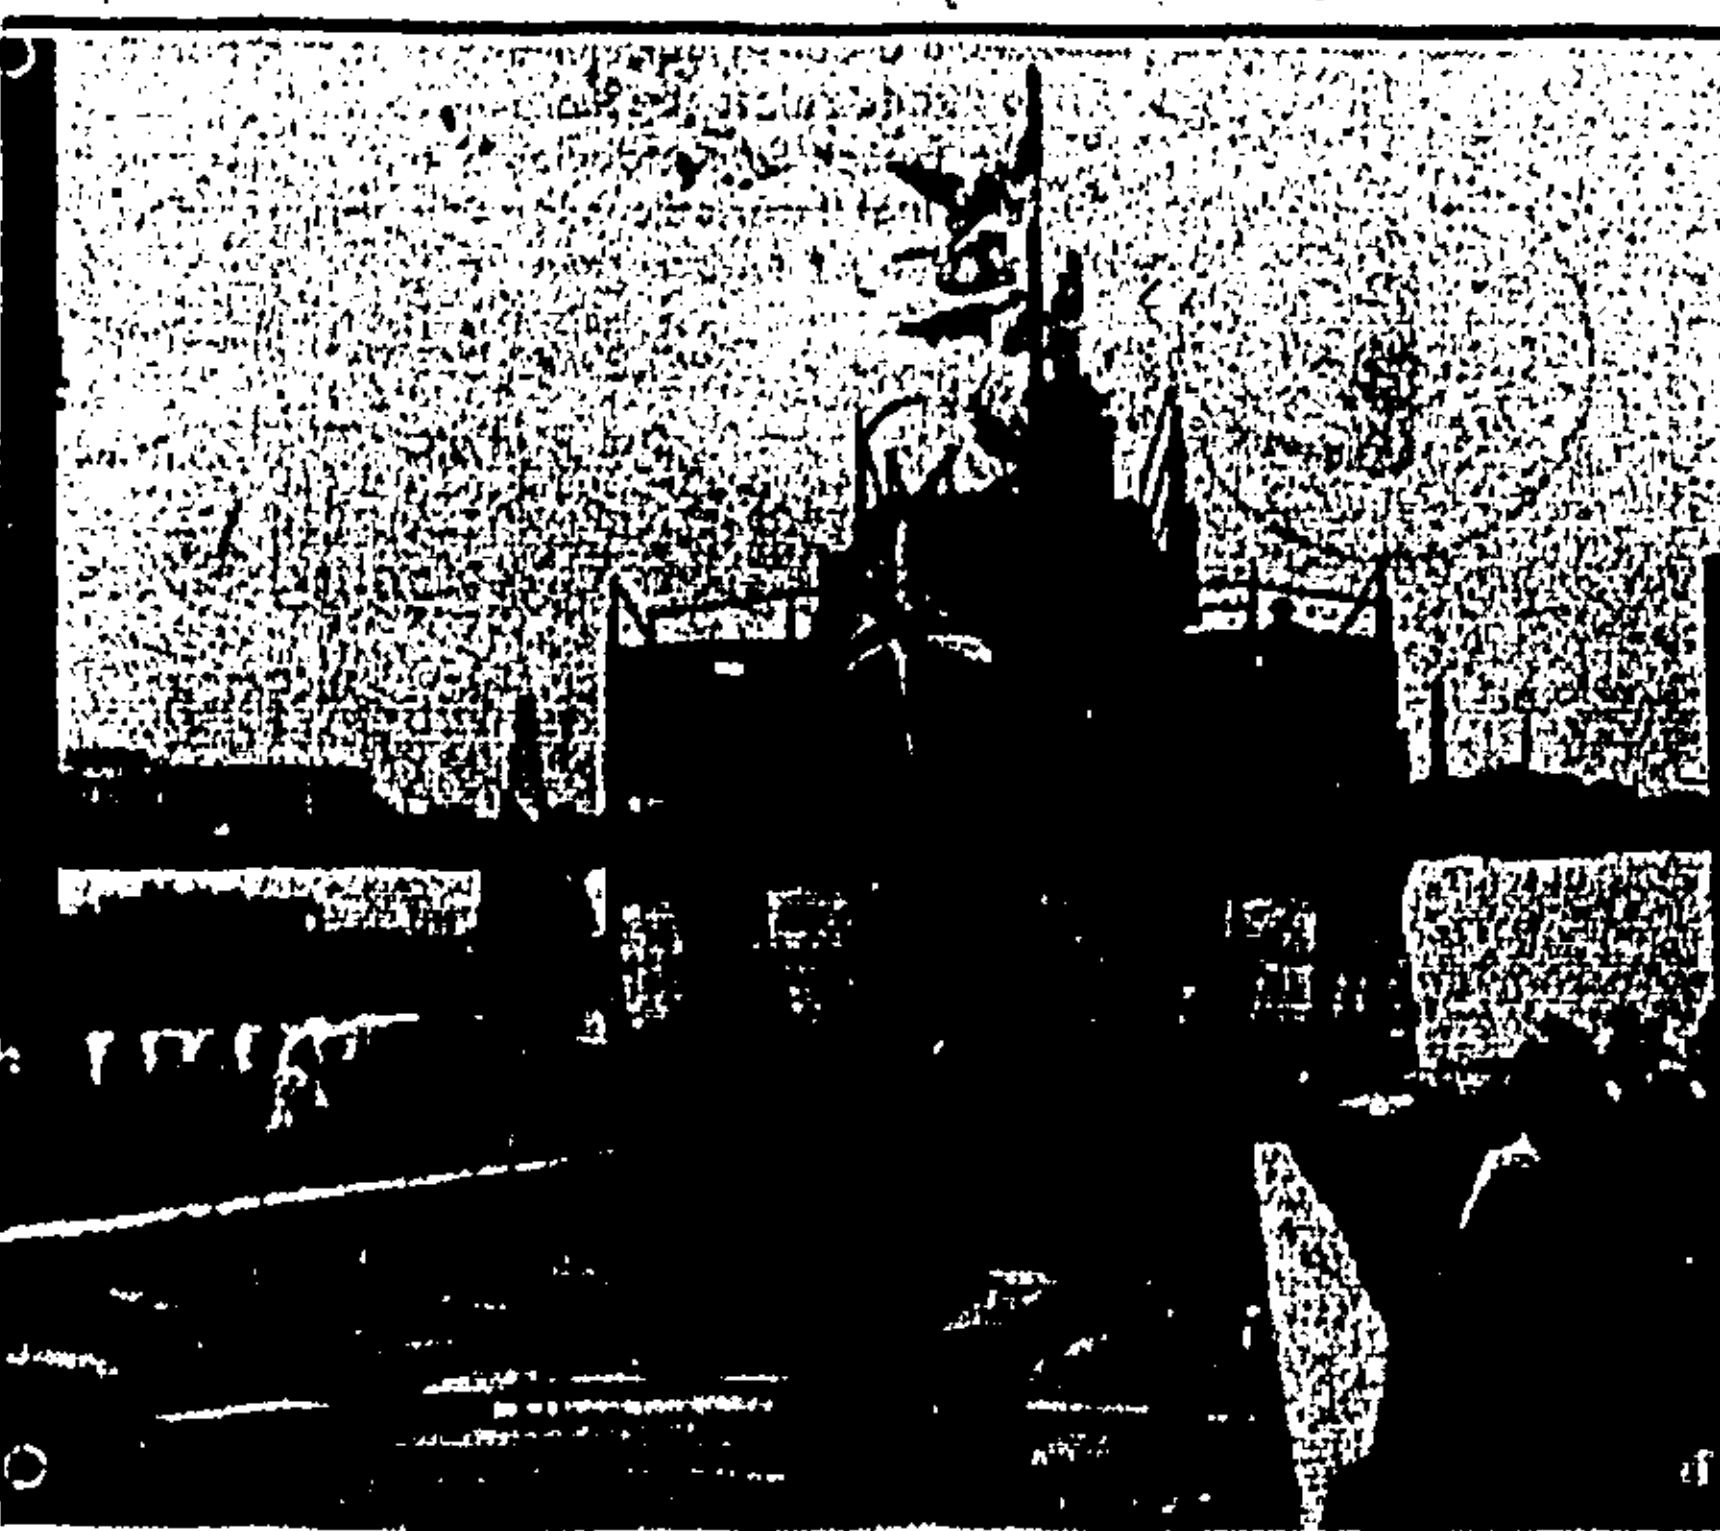

Dr. L. J. Stuart, President of the Yenching University at Peking, landed in Shanghai last week on his way back to the old northern capital after a visit to the United States during which he held conferences with President Roosevelt on the situation in the Far East. In the above picture he is seen facing the camera, in conversation with a friend.

Protection from the sky-terror of lightning is the aim of Arthur O. Austin, inset at right, whose experiments led him to believe the menace has been conquered. At top, a scale model of the dirigible Akron showing "artificial lightning" entering the ship at the nose and leaping out harmlessly at the tail. Centre right, a three-foot model plane sustaining a stroke of 3,000,000 volts potential which enters at a wing-tip and leaves through the tail. Austin's work in this field at the laboratories of the Ohio Insulator Co., at Barberton, are the most hopeful of any in the world looking to the safeguarding of ships of the air from lightning.

Bomb-laden sky-warriors are dropping over southern California in the above picture, taken by the Air Service during a week of air activity to test the air defenses of the south Pacific coast. The Ninth Bombardment Squadron is shown hidden by clouds from Baldwin Hills below. Problems of protecting the naval oil reserve tanks and concealing grounded air corps planes from bombers were worked out.

Built in England, shipped to Shanghai in parts and re-assembled by the Kiangwan Dock and Engineering Works, the gunboat H.M.S. Sand-piper was launched last week at the Kiangwan Dock. The picture, which was taken as the vessel was leaving the slip for the water, shows the flatness of her hull; she draws only two feet of water.

blow over. Bill," said Kay, "has girls before this—"

"N-no," Kay admitted that. "I guess not. Honestly, she's not a bad sort, Mother. She was married to this man when she was only 16. He's no good, I hear, and she's been supporting him. You can't blame her for wanting a divorce."

"I can't blame her for anything," Mrs. O'Dare said steadily. "It's only that—"

She could not finish the sentence. Bill, her Bill, mixed up in such an affair! She had hoped for great things for Bill, ever since he was a little boy. When his father died and he had had to leave school her heart had ached for him. He was so bright, so earnest. He had a fine mind, with a mechanical turn. She had wanted college for him, wanted him to forge ahead, and now—this! He would be stamped for life as "the fellow who walked off with another man's wife." The circumstances did not matter. The bare facts only would be remembered.

She was a self-controlled woman.

All her children knew and appreciated that fact. But now her calm almost deserted her. It had been a hard year. Monnie's palpable unhappiness, Kay's discontent—these things had borne themselves in upon her. And now this!

She dashed the unwilling tears from her eyes. Kay watched as she picked up the telephone.

"Mother! What are you going to do?"

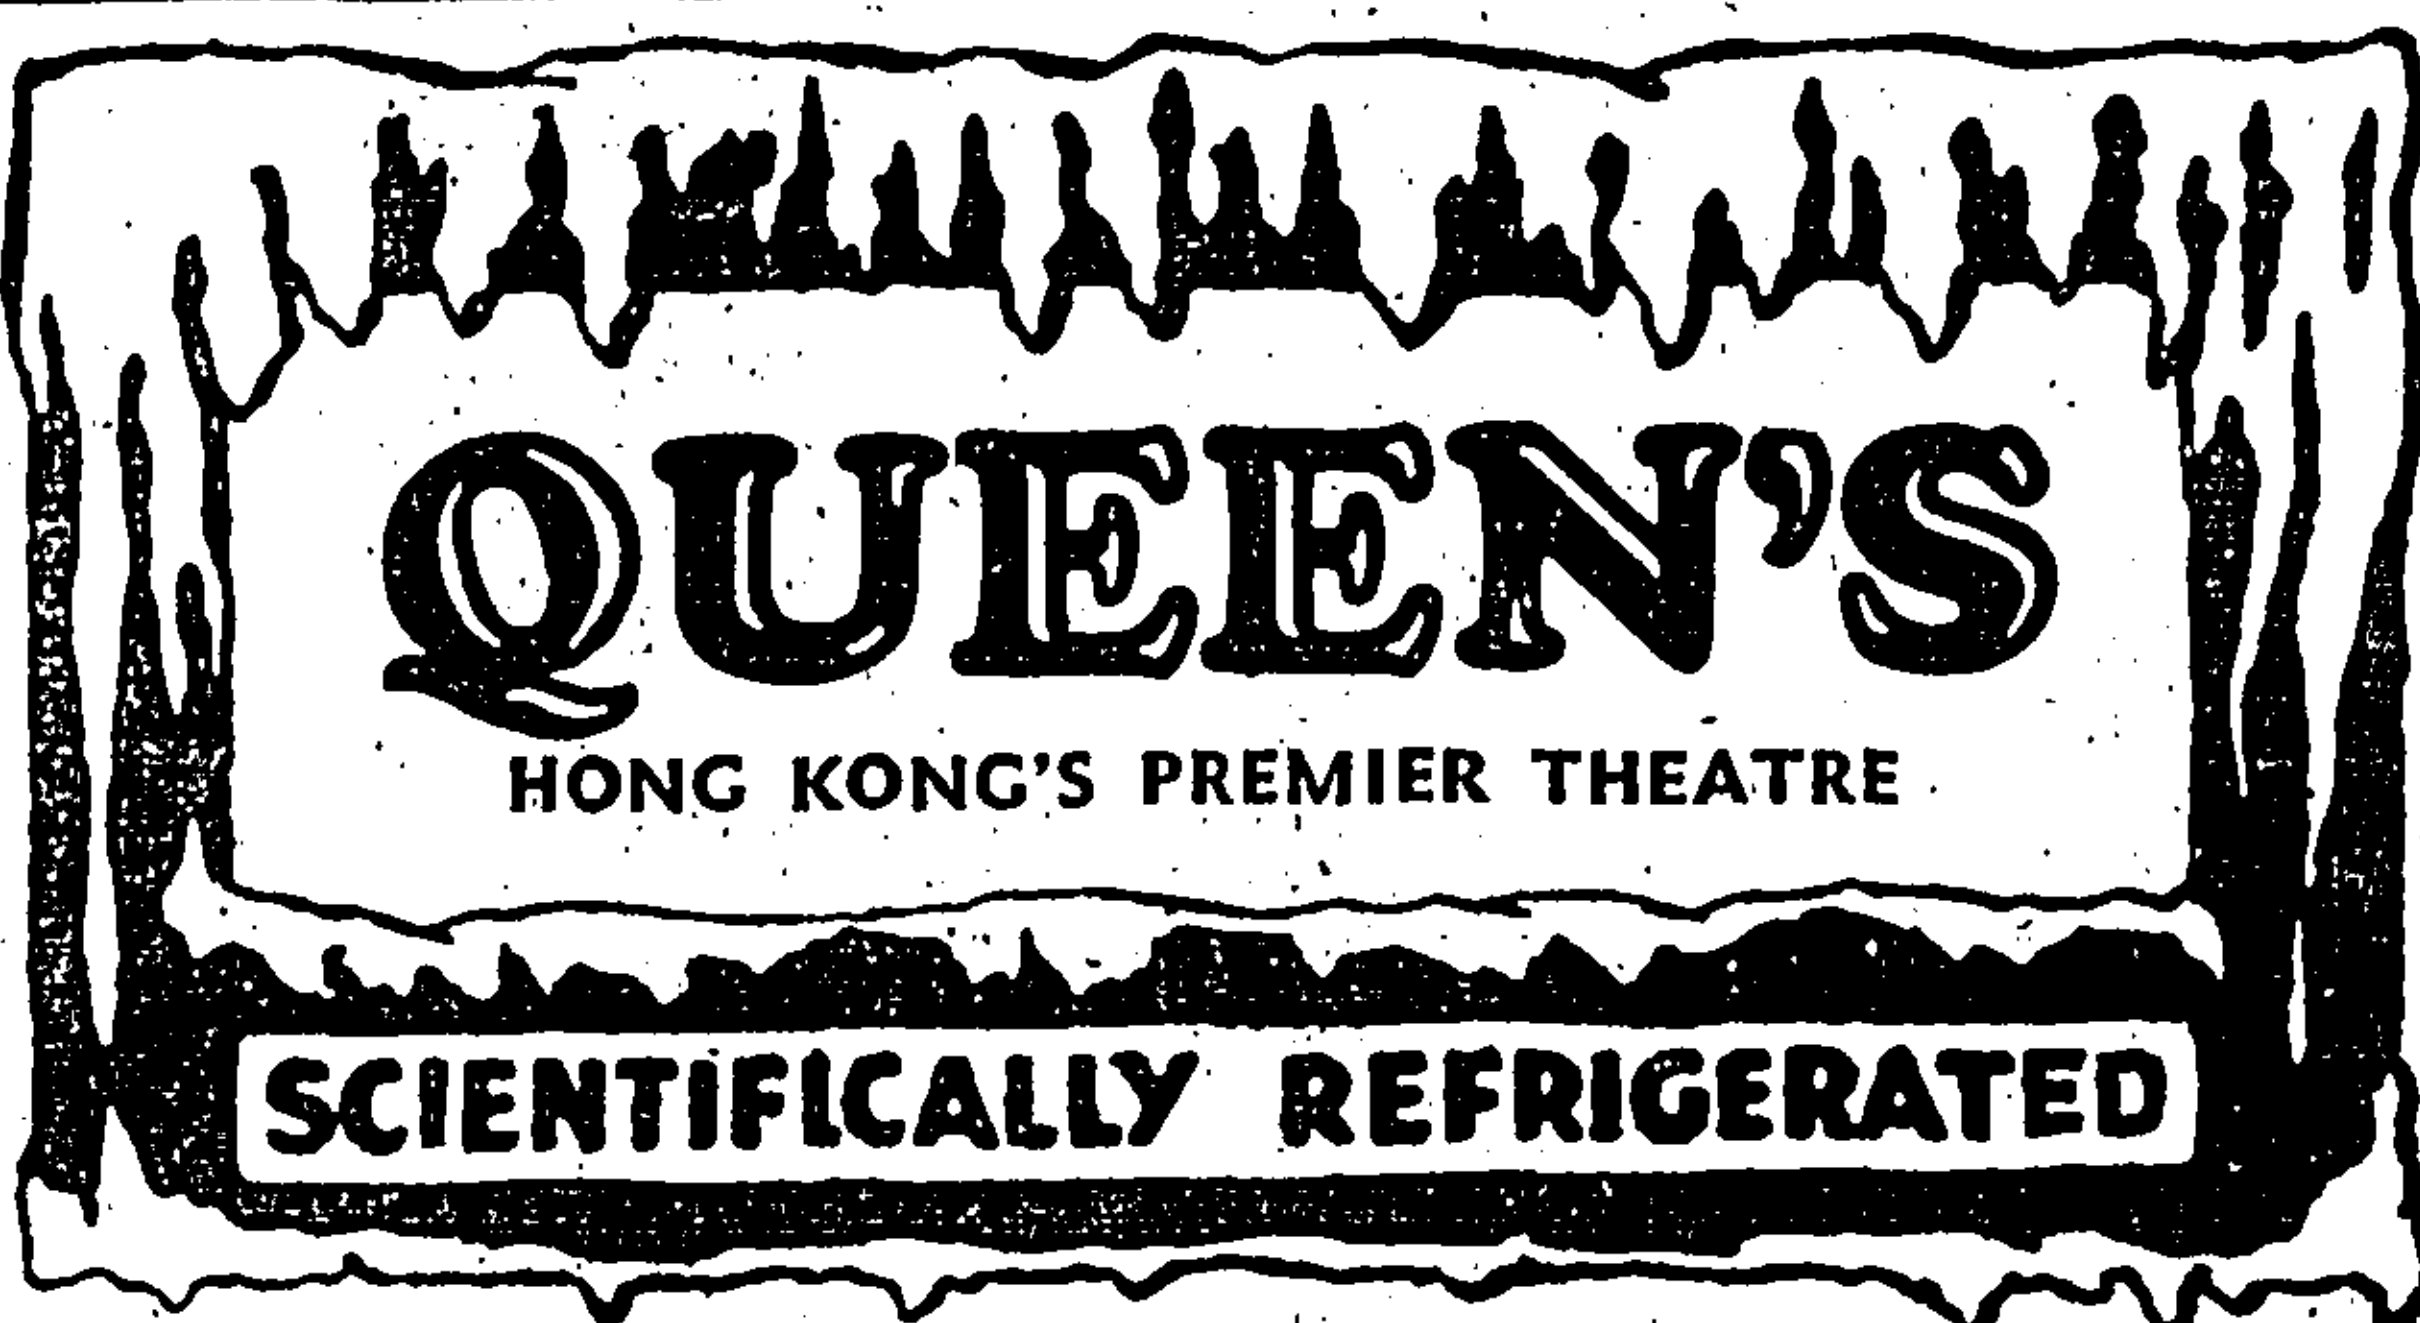

"Do?" She lifted her head proudly. "I'm going to ask Bill to bring this girl to see me, of course. I must know the girl my son plans to marry."

THE FINANCIAL OCTOPUS

The enquiry into the gigantic financial operations of the famous firm of J. P. Morgan and Company having concluded, the U.S. Senate Banking Committee has begun upon Kuhn, Loeb and Company, though it is difficult to see what good purpose is likely to be served. A little more scope for the scandal sheets may be provided, but essentially, the evidence is not likely to provide anything more than the existence of the system and practice similar to that governing the affairs of the House of Morgan. Sufficient has already been revealed to justify severe restrictions. The "sensations" when analysed merely illustrate the contentions of opponents of the existing order of society that the control of human affairs exercised by such concerns is damaging to the interests of the community as a whole. Judged by the most modern economic theory, daily gaining adherents, the facts are self-condemnatory. Judged by ordinary every-day standards, they are disturbing enough. There is the unpleasant implication, for instance, that the effect of the favours granted by the House of Morgan to certain influential men has put them under an obligation, liable to influence their attitude in affairs involving the public welfare. As explained by Mr. Morgan and his partners, the transactions appear a reasonably natural one, disposing of issues acquired as an incident to other activities. And it certainly would have taken unusual prescience even for a Morgan partner to have told in 1929 that Mr. William H. Woodin would to-day be Secretary of the Treasury. Yet the existence of these practices is fraught with serious possibilities where disinterestedness is so vital as in government. The deals, if they have its unpleasant connotations in financial etiquette, illustrate a type of practice that is not confined to Wall Street nor to any one line of business. It is the practice of giving favoured treatment to one set of buyers as compared with another, of making special discounts and seeking special advantages, of using outside inducements to build up trade. How many of those who will wag their heads at the Morgan disclosures will refrain from seeking out a friend through whom to buy a rug or a refrigerator at a "wholesale" price? Oil companies have seen the wisdom of attempting at least to root out the giving of undeserved discounts or of making the discount a plain price cut which the whole public could enjoy. Retail stores have taken steps to curb some abuses of accounts. It does not lend dignity to the securities market or the investment banker to picture issues of speculative stocks being passed out to customers and friends in much the way a grocery might give away kewpie dolls or roller skates as premiums to children. To reach the particular situation pointed out in the securities business by legislation would seem difficult. The American Government might undertake to require that when a stock is listed on an exchange all sales of it shall be made through the exchange. This could be enforced only by prohibiting any other transfers to be made on the books of the company, and such a regulation could be made only under a federal chartering law. There are other and better reasons for such a law. But the exchanges themselves can take action against such abuses. If they value public confidence they will make regulations under which the public may know there have been no sales of a stock to insiders or may know on what terms they have bought. Investors with whom the testimony of recent financial investigations has sunk in will demand that investment bankers' offices be made "one price" stores. In such a market there would be little or no opportunity for the type of "ground floor" operations that is now under discussion. The surest defence against advantage-seeking abuses in all branches of business is the development of a sense of honour and justice that will neither offer nor accept any special or insinuating favours.

Police Changes in London

The decision of the British Government to effect important changes in the organization of the London police could hardly fail to arouse as much controversy as interest. For this admirable body of disciplined men, though constantly subject to criticism, is on the whole extremely popular among the general public. There has undoubtedly been much exaggeration in the British press about the increase of crime. Murder and attempts to murder have steadily diminished throughout the last thirty years. Assaults, cruelty, malicious damage, drunkenness and many other offences are far fewer. The most serious increase has been in crimes against property, such as burglary, larceny and fraud, often accompanied by violence, and committed by criminals of a new type, men of cunning and energy, using automobiles, telephones and mechanisms of their own devising. To deal with criminals of this kind a far more elaborate police machine has become necessary. Trained intellects are required to direct its services both at headquarters and at local centres. The main object of the proposed reforms is to provide a directing staff of highly educated and specially trained men. To provide men suitable for these posts a police college is to be established where selected candidates will be trained for two years. Opponents of the reforms see in them an attempt to militarize the police, and to introduce Fascist influences.

THE KING'S ENGLISH IN THE KING'S STATUTES

By His Honour Sir EDWARD PARRY.

The use of the King's English in the King's Statutes is both extensive and peculiar. Every one agrees that too many words are used, and litigation continually reminds that the words that are used are often peculiarly unfortunate, and fail to explain what was at the back of the author's mind and what he intended when he wrote them down. Perhaps we want a statutory editor, armed with a stalwart editorial blue pencil and the power to strike out from the proofs of the statutory drafts presented to him anything that he did not understand himself, or thought might be embarrassing and irrelevant to the general reader.

We certainly ought to have some system whereby statutes are so drafted that High Court Judges could readily understand their intention. On May 3, for instance, we read that the Lord Chief Justice, assisted by Mr. Justice Avory and Mr. Justice Humphreys, spent a merry May morning puzzling over the meaning of the words "special occasions" in the Road Traffic Act, 1930. The words occurred in one place by themselves, and in another in the phrase "once meetings and other like special occasions."

There were quite a lot of appeals about the meaning of these words, and they came from rural Cornwall. It seems that in some cases the magistrates had held that "special occasions" included weekly cattle fairs. Now to an ox who goes to a weekly fair, on his last journey towards the slaughter house, this is a very "special occasion." But to the farmer who takes him there, or the butcher who meets him there, it is merely a weekly incident arising out of and in the course of their employment. Even the Solicitor-General, who appeared for the statute, so to speak, agreed that a weekly cattle fair was not a "special occasion."

Now in the earliest statutes of which we have any knowledge the language is clear and direct. "Thou shalt not steal" could not trouble the minds of the dullest Justice of the Peace, and most Clerks to the Justices that I have met could easily explain to the Bench whether there was evidence upon which the Bench might convict the prisoner of stealing.

Vast legal treatises have been written about grand and petit larceny, and the doctrine of "asportation," and the animus furandi; but it all comes back to this—Are you sure that man intended to steal? Then, if he did, you must deal out certain punishments to him. The statute "Thou shalt not steal," with a schedule of punishments the judge may award for stealing, is practically all you want to-day.

I am not sure that when we find a statute has been so drafted as to prevent its intention being carried out, we should not to-day allow the House of Lords to amend it. The words "arising out of and in the course of his employment" were used by old-fashioned judges who disliked the theory of the Workmen's Compensation Act, in order to deprive workmen and their dependants, whom they left behind if death ensued, of the benefits they were entitled to.

The way they tried to misread a somewhat awkward and careless phrase was to suggest that a man must prove that at the moment of the accident he was actually doing something "arising out of his employment." At last a case occurred in which a man in a colliery was killed in trying to stop a runaway horse. He was not, of course, employed to stop runaway horses, so it did not arise out of his employment, but it clashed with A. L. Smith's sense of justice that the widow should not draw the insurance money and he invented a doctrine of acts done in an emergency to meet the case.

For some time arbitrators and the Court of Appeal did not administer the Act correctly. They drew nearer and nearer to the conclusion that the mere fact that the man was injured by accident disentitled him to compensation, for obviously no man is employed to have accidents in his master's time.

But for the House of Lords, the Court of Appeal of that date would have ruined the scheme of the Act. It was the good and outspoken common-sense of Lord Halsbury that saved the situation. He could not peddle about propositions of "scope of employment," and the rest; but told the Court of Appeal that "the broad proposition, of course, was that there should be compensation given to every workman in certain trades, when an injury happened to him in the course of his employment." Lord Lindley informed the world that the results arrived at in the Court of Appeal were "staring and untenable."

These were hard days for County Court Judges who, under the absurd statute, were unpaid arbitrators under the Act. When they followed the right interpretation of the Act they were treated with contempt in the Court of Appeal; but if, as usually happened, the case went to the House of Lords it was pleasant to hear what Lord Halsbury, Lord Davey, and others had to say about it all when they set things right.

It is curious how people who have to draft statutes, decrees, and orders for the regulation of the affairs of the simple citizens glory in periphrastic obscurity. I remember in the Pensions days Sir Stephen Demetriadi, who did good voluntary work for the Department during the War, showing me a paper he had to send out to a seaman or stoker claiming an allowance for his wife. In it there were many obscure alternatives, but I will only quote the last: "or if his full pay and allowances in the nature thereof of exceed 22s. 6d. a week is not less than the weekly excess of such full pay and allowances over 21s., provided that if the excess be not an exact multiple of 6d. it shall be not less than the precise multiple of 6d. next below such excess."

One wonders what the men on the lower deck thought of this jargon, as Sir Arthur Quiller Couch pointed out to us in the "Art of Writing." Unfortunately, jargon seems embedded in the brains of the politicians, the Civil Service, and those who draft, edit and publish our statutes.

Even a great Minister cannot say "No" to a simple question, but replies that "the answer is in the negative." And Sir Arthur points out that if your language be jargon, your intellect will almost certainly correspond, and where, your mind should go straight will dodge. For, as he truly says, the Style is the Man, and where a man's treasure is, there his heart, and his brain, and his writing will be also.

—London Morning Post.

The Very Idea!

WHAT THE DICKENS!

By Eddie Pickwick Kelly.

AS this is the time of the year when all our thoughts turn to Christmas, we have decided to write an appropriated story. It will be all about a man named Scrooge. Scrooge was a bad man. Which was a bad thing.

He sat before the crackling fireplace, thinking, thinking, thinking, etc.

It was Christmas Eve. And he was alone in the great, silent room.

Suddenly he heard voices, children's voices, singing beautiful Christmas carols, which led him back to his own childhood days. He listened while the voices faded, then they faded into the distance, and old Scrooge was again alone with his reveries.

He was a sick man, and he knew it. He was getting too old to go out on binges with Edward Kelly. That last one had nearly settled him. He coughed several times, hands trembling. Outside the wind fell and the snow howled, while inside the Telegraph office Edward Kelly wiped the perspiration from his brow and paused to think.

Editor's note: Get on with the story.

Eddie's note: Say, you, who's got to make this thing long enough to fill a column?

"I must go to her to-night, even though I perish," he exclaimed suddenly.

He was thinking of the Widow Pounds, and her four young children, who lived out at Kowloon Tong. She was a poor woman who washed for a living.

Editor's note: Do only poor women wash?

Eddie's note: Yes, during the water restrictions.

Her husband had died five years previously of alcoholic poisoning, through drinking heavenly.

Editor's note: The author means drinking heavily.

Eddie's note: The Editor is a teetotaler.

Old Scrooge was very wealthy. He had been a selfish old man now for nearly seventy years. At last, it appeared, he was going to do a decent, kindly act.

A gust of wind nearly upset him as he opened the front door, and the sun beat fiercely upon his greying head. Old Scrooge was seized with another dreadful fit of coughing.

The weather was even more severe than he had anticipated. His feet were numb and his frail figure rocked perilously in the grip of the blizzard. The wind shrieked louder and louder. Blinded by snow, he staggered on and on.

More alive than dead, he finally recognised the single, fluttering light of the Widow Pounds's house.

Somehow, he reached the door and beat it feebly with his numb fist—then darkness came.

Editor's note: Suppose he fainted from sunstroke?

Eddie's note: No. The sun had set.

When he awoke, he recognised the four little pinched faces about him. He noticed the shabby, poverty stricken house, and shuddered. He still felt cold.

The Widow Pounds's gentle voice reached his half-frozen ear.

"Why—why did you come to visit us on such a night, Mr. Scrooge?"

The old man feebly extended his bony hand.

"I have come," he said simply, "for the rent."

Kelly's Tests For Civil Servants.

We suggest the following task in the next examination for civil servants. Nowadays, thanks to the frank publicity that attaches to American film stars, non-stop revue, and illustrated lingerie advertisements, there is no longer even any pretence of mystery about a lady's undies. A villain any sane, unprejudiced citizen advance the theory that the average man, though he is turned out in all his sartorial strata by Row and New Bond Street, is a graceful or pretty spectacle in his vest and underpants! Such an object of aesthetic ridicule he looks, in fact, that the wonder is he still attracts enough romance to qualify as actor in a divorce suit.

A woman in similar undress, however, judged by all the available evidences, still looks both fascinating and coquettish. Explain this.

A DAY OF UPSETS AT WIMBLEDON TOURNAMENT

vious day beat Von Kehring, the Hungarian, made his exit when he ran up against Jack Crawford, the Australian "ace." But the Frenchman strove desperately hard and nearly captured the third set.

LONG DUEL.

J. Condon, the South African Davis Cup player sustained a dramatic defeat when he fell a victim to Steadman, a New Zealand nominee.

The match went the full distance and was featured by its "no quarter" atmosphere. Steadman had to concede the first set at the 20th game, but fought back to win the second and third. Condon refused to give up and pushed home a lead to win the fourth set at 7-5, but the effort proved too much and Steadman broke through in the fifth set at the tenth game.

COCHET HARD PRESSED.

Henri Cochet, who has had a very comfortable passage so far, nearly came a cropper to C. L. Burwell, the Oxford "Blue" in his third round tie to-day.

The Frenchman lost the first set at 6-2, recovered to win the succeeding two sets and then, when everybody expected him to go out on the customary three sets to one, Burwell produced a crop of dazzling strokes which gave him the fourth at 7-5.

The strain upon Burwell was sufficient to make him give over the initiative to Cochet, and the French wizard succeeded in going to his points after losing three games.

DOUBLES MATCHES.

A highly satisfactory British success was the victory of Dr. J. C. Gregory and F. H. D. Wilde over Ito and Miki, the Japanese combination.

The Englishmen had the game in their pockets for most of the time, the only period in which they had to take a back seat being in the third set.

G. P. Hughes and Mrs. Helen Willis Moody, one of the much fancied couples for the Mixed Doubles title scored an easy and impressive second round win against E. R. Avery and Mrs. Strawson, losing only five games in two sets.

Latest scores as cabled by Reuter are:

FIGHTING FLOOD

$600,000 VOTE FOR EMERGENCIES

Nanking, June 28. The Central Political Council met to-day, and foremost in its weighty agenda the consideration of steps for the combatting of floods was undertaken.

The Council voted for the appropriation of $600,000 for emergency measures in connexion with the flood menace.

Latest reports, considered by the Council, indicated that the immediate danger of serious flooding along the Yangtze River course has considerably abated.—Reuter.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET FIRM

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was firmer yesterday. Business done 5,510,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—The market was irregular with the exception of a dozen or so special issues in the 'wet' and railroad groups which advanced broadly. Active turnover in 'wet' issues was due to repeat victories in California and West Virginia and in Illinois due to favourable earnings reports and anticipation of favorable loadings. Profit-taking broke wheat prices.

Ironage Magazine reports:—Steel production advanced to 53% of capacity since March, being one of the sharpest recoveries in the industry's history, mainly due to momentum of automobile manufacturers' demand. The question now is how further output can be increased without business from the construction industry and railroads both of which heretofore were insignificant. The greatest price uncertainty is now pending to the extent of impending wage advances. An increase of 10% in wages would raise costs from $2 to $5 per ton. Cable received from Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, New York: Specialties still dominate the market with standard issues less inclined to respond to good trade news and sterling advance. Caution seems advisable to some extent. The Government's weekly cotton crop report is better than expected but general rains are needed. Rumours of the possibility of abandonment of the gold standard by the remaining European countries and increased demand for labour in the proposed textile reconstruction have added to the uncertainty.

Wholesale Prices opened sharply lower on sterling application process tax and overbought conditions. Railroads failed on prospects of rains in Canada and the Northwest. Dow-Jones averages:

KOWLOON UNION CHURCH

FAREWELL PARTY FOR CHOIRMASTER

The members of the choir of the Kowloon Union Church had a social gathering last night to say goodbye to its choirmaster, Mr. J. J. Cornelius.

Some original games were played and refreshments, kindly provided by Dr. E. L. Allen, were served.

Speeches eulogising the unfailing interest of Mr. Cornelius and the present proficiency of the choir were made by Mr. David Gow and Mr. J. W. Proven and they voiced the feelings of the choir by wishing Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius bon voyage and the best of everything in the Homeland.

Dr. Allen spoke on behalf of himself and the congregation, after which Mrs. Allen, on behalf of the choir, presented Mr. Cornelius with a blackwood coffee table and cups and saucers and a cigarette lighter. Following this, the Church "boy" added his gift to the others.

In reply, Mr. Cornelius briefly reviewed his association with the choir, and thanked in particular the members who had given their unwavering support from the beginning, and also Mrs. Frank Short for her untiring energy at the organ. He welcomed the new members, urging all to give their best in this branch of Church work.

The proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. Cornelius, who has been in the Colony for the past four years, has been transferred to Warrimoo, Essex. They sail on the P. and O. Mantua on Saturday morning.

LYTTON'S LUCK

ASSASSINATION PLOT FAILS

Shanghai, June 28. It is sensationally revealed in a case here that members of the Lytton Mission which investigated the Manchurian situation were marked for assassination, but escaped because no opportunity presented itself.

Four Chinese brought up in the District Court this morning all confessed that they participated in attempts on the lives of Lytton Commission members and of Mr. T. V. Soong, China's Finance Minister.

The attempted killing of Mr. Soong occurred in 1931, when he alighted from a train at Shanghai and the assassins opened fire. They also threw two bombs, but Mr. Soong was unhurt.

The accused declared when Lord Lytton and his colleagues arrived they trailed them but could find no opportunity to kill them. They were ordered by their superiors to kill Mr. Soong and the Lytton party, but they did not reveal who the superiors were.—Reuter Special.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

SIAM MAY RESTRAIN WHAT LAW DOES NOT PROHIBIT.—Seneca.

The marriage will shortly take place of Mr. S. V. Geronimo, musician, of 1, Granville Road, Kowloon, and Miss Euphemia Dacanay, of The Orient Tobacco Company, Kowloon.

One case of typhoid was reported to the health authorities on Tuesday.

The Honorary Secretary of the Peak Club desires to remind members that the annual general meeting will be held this evening at 8 p.m. The attendance of ladies (wives and relatives of members) will be cordially welcomed.

LAST OF CHATER'S BUNGALOW.

FOUR REMAINING SITES PUT UP FOR AUCTION

The remaining four sites in the estate formerly known as Chater's Bungalow, were offered for sale by public auction in Messrs. Lammer's rooms yesterday afternoon, but were withdrawn in the absence of any bids, although quite a number of people attended.

Acquired from the French Mission two years ago, by a syndicate of Chinese investors, the original building from which the estate had derived its name was demolished and the former pleasure with its tree-covered terraces disappeared, as the ground was levelled and transformed into building sites. Nearly $300,000 was spent by the syndicate by the time the property, constituting roughly a rectangle with Nathan and Austin Roads on two sides, was thrown open to individual purchasers.

Of the 86 sites into which the area of roughly 250,000 square feet was divided, 82 have been taken up for detached and semi-detached houses of a strictly European type. The remaining four sites, offered for sale yesterday, with a combined area of a little over 16,000 sq. ft. represent the last holdings of the syndicate in the estate.

They consist of a piece measuring 2,550 sq. ft. fronting on Nathan Road, and three others, each with an area of 4,488 sq. ft. suitable for detached or semi-detached houses, fronting the new 40 ft. wide road running through the length of the estate, and to which the name of Hill Wood Road has been given.

The estate as a whole is considered by investors to be "most desirable," being in the forefront of general development in Kowloon. Its desirability was expressed in these terms by the auctioneer, Mr. Lionel Lammer, who, when he opened the sale, said that the property would be put up at so much a square foot.

He opened the sale of the three Hill Wood Road sites at $2.95 a sq. ft. and of the site fronting Nathan Road at $6.90, without, however, being rewarded by a single offer.

All four lots were in the end withdrawn.

AUSTRIAN FINANCE.

SEEKING NEW LOANS IN OTHER STATES

London, June 28. The Austrian Finance Minister, Herr Buresch, and the Minister of the Interior, Herr Schumy, have arrived in London, seeking large loans to assist in the strengthening of Austria's exchange.

Herr Buresch, interviewed, declared that he was sanguine of results. He had set out upon his mission anticipating a bargain for his Government. He wished, he said, to obtain from Great Britain 100,000,000 schillings, the same sum from France, 30,000,000 from Italy, 8,000,000 from Switzerland, 5,000,000 from Belgium and 8,000,000 from Holland.

The entire proceeds of the loan, he said, would be devoted to strengthening the exchange.—Reuter.

RELIEF REQUEST.

CHINESE RETURNING FROM ABROAD

Nanking, June 28. A spokesman of the Overseas Affairs Commission told newspapermen to-day that the Commission had requested the Executive Yuan to grant the sum of $500,000, from the proceeds of the American wheat and cotton loan, to relieve distressed Chinese who had been obliged to return from abroad because of depression or anti-Chinese immigration laws.—Reuter.

INDIAN POLICY

GOVERNMENT PLAN CRITICISED

London, June 28. At an extremely important meeting of the Conservative Central Committee to-day, an overwhelming majority rejected a resolution which virtually condemned the Government's Indian policy.

The meeting voted after Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill and Mr. G. W. Lloyd, Parliamentary Private Secretary to the Lord President of the Council (Mr. Baldwin), had delivered spirited addresses. There were other speakers both for and against the Government's policy.

Finally, the meeting adopted a motion, with which Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin agreed, reserving its decision until the report of the Joint Select Committee on Indian affairs had been made public and digested.—Reuter.

MORE SPLENDID BOWLING BY BECK

6 FOR 62 AGAINST DUMPLINGS

NOMADS 56 IN AREARS

SAYER & BAKER SAVE THE DAY

KEEN CRICKET.

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1901. Received June 27, 1933 a.m.)

Exeter, June 28. Although A. C. Beck, the Hongkong Cricket Club bowler took the chief honours in the opening of a two-day match between the Hongkong Nomads and Devon Dumlplings which started here to-day, the Nomads owed it to G. R. Sayer and F. Baker of the Civil Service that they finished only 56 runs in arrears on the first innings. The close of play scores were: Devon Dumlplings 179 and 10 for 1.

H. K. Nomads 123. Batting first, the Dumlplings had a difficult time up to lunch countering the excellent Hongkong attack and they lost four wickets for 48 runs.

After the interval, the Nomads lost their grip on the game, and the Dumlplings scored with a fair amount of ease, finally aggregating 179 before the last wicket fell.

SKILFUL BECK. A. C. Beck was a constant source of worry to the batsmen, and he gave away runs very sparingly.

He was responsible for taking six wickets at a cost of 62 runs. This is the second success Beck has enjoyed since the tour started. In the first match against the Somerset Stragglers he took 8 for 53.

The Nomads found run-getting an even harder task than wicket-taking and half the side were out for less than 50 runs.

SAVE A COLLAPSE. After this Sayer and Baker scored freely and did much to retrieve a bad position.

Sayer scored 36 before dismissal and Baker had the satisfaction of carrying his bat for a similar score.

Both Richardson and Anderson failed and only Macfarlane with 16 to his credit did anything to help the score along.

The last wicket fell at 123 and the Dumlplings started on their second innings, when they lost a wicket for 10 runs before close of play, leaving them 66 runs ahead with nine wickets in hand.

FAST BOWLING STORM

Lancashire Batsman Injured

BOWES BARRACKED

London, June 6. Watson, the Lancashire batsman, lay dazed for an hour yesterday after his cheek had been cut open by a ball from Bowes, the Yorkshire fast bowler, in the Yorkshire-Lancashire match at Old Trafford.

Magnificent bowling by Verity and Macaulay, who performed the "hat-trick" (three wickets with successive balls) enabled Yorkshire to win by an innings—one of the most sensational results in the long series of grim encounters between these famous rivals.

Bowes, who toured Australia with Jardine's team, raised the ire of the crowd by sending down several short deliveries, which, landing well down the pitch, flew up

Primo Carnera, the giant Italian heavyweight, and Jack Sharkey, heavyweight champion, meet to-night in a title bout at New York. Here are the contestants, shaking hands after signing the contract for the scrap. In the centre is Jimmy Johnston, the promoter.

CHICAGO WIN A DOUBLE HEADER

New York, June 28. A double header defeat for Philadelphia against Chicago featured the National League baseball programme to-day. The Giants broke even in a double header with Pittsburgh as did Brooklyn with Cincinnati.

Although the Yankees won easily against Detroit, they gained no advantage as Washington Senators, leaders of the American League also scored heavily against Cleveland.

Scores as supplied by Reuter were:

The St. Louis v Boston match was called off at the fourth innings owing to rain.

BARRACKED.

Hopwood was struck on the thigh and then a rising delivery hit Watson on the head, forcing him to retire.

Bowes was barracked by the crowd, but this died down when Ernest Tyldesley refused to begin batting until the uproar stopped.

Yorkshire's victory was the first registered by either side against each other in two days of a three-days match since 1915. Then Lancashire won. In 1910 the Red Rose also triumphed at a time when championship matches were restricted to two days.

Macaulay's "hat-trick" was his second this season.

ROUGED KNEES FOR TENNIS

SUZANNE SETS NEW FASHION

Paris, June 6.

Suzanne Lenglen suggests that women tennis player should rouge their knees.

She followed her own suggestion and appeared with dabs of rouge on her knees in a practice match against Helen Jacobs, the American, in Paris.

"I decided this spring there was no reason why women should look like scarecrows on the courts," she said. "Since most of us frankly use make-up before a gallery of spectators, why shouldn't we do something about our knees? On the courts they are as much in evidence as our faces."

"I don't think women players consider their looks sufficiently. Even a poet won't rhapsodise over a feminine knee. But we don't need to look like freaks. Certainly judicious rouge on the knees would make us less bizarre in appearance."

Girl Twice Champion in a Day

CAR DASH FROM TOWN TO TOWN

London, June 6.

Miss Violet Webb, the international hurdler, won two championships in similar events yesterday.

She won the Southern Counties 80 metres hurdles at Brentwood, equalling the British record with 12 seconds, and then, travelling by fast car, went on to the contest between the North, South and Midlands at St. Albans, and came in first there.

In her heat she again equalled the British record and the final she won in 12 1/5 seconds.

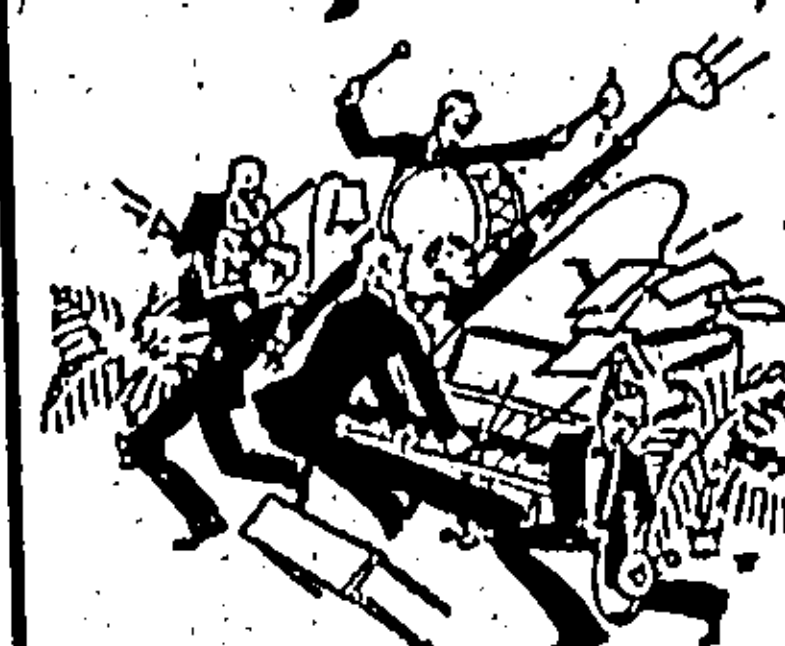

TWO TIES.

The high jump was almost as exciting. Miss Mary Milne, the international jumper, and Miss N. Carrington, for the South tied twice at 5ft. 0 1/2 inch while Miss Okell the Northern Champion and Miss Halfall tied for third place.

The South won with 67 points, North having 47 and the Midlands 17.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Those who have been hoping and praying for another "Sunshine Sudio" will find their wishes more than adequately met in "Marry Me", the new Renée Muller picture, which will be shown at the King's Theatre next Sunday.

It is an engaging story (the main venue is a gramophone factory) which "Marry Me" tells, with the expert assistance of those three monarchs of laughter, Harry Green, George Robey, and Billy Caryl, and of course the charming Renée Muller herself, who is supported by Ian Hunter, Maurice Evans, Charles Hawtrey, and Viola Lyel.

It is the story of a pretty gramophone recordist who is in love with a fellow employee (Ian Hunter). The young gentleman, head of a bachelor household of three brothers, is slow to realise Renée's affection for him; and hankers after "a rich marriage." He is unaware that Renée has determined to "get her man" and that, having sought the advice of her "boss", she is about to bring football strategy to bear upon her matrimonial aspirations. How she secures the elusive young gentleman at last; how she enlists the services of a matrimonial agency in bringing Romeo to heel, makes up a story that is as melodious as it is funny.

"A Lady's Profession"

Madame Racketeer has returned to the screen in a new racket of giggle-water and laughing-gas in "A Lady's Profession," with Allison Skipworth, Roland Young and Sari Maritza, at the Queen's.

Brittle humour, infectious laughter wriggle through the story as Miss Skipworth, in the role of a British lady, leaves the safety of her ancestral castle to solve the problems of an impoverished nobleman who persists in leaping from scrape to scrape. Roland Young is excellent in the bit-part of Englishman. Sari Maritza and Kent Taylor, the new Paramount find, play the romantic leads, while the irrepressible comies, Roscoe Karns and Warren Hymer, complete the laugh sextette.

It's one of those delightful comedies that Paramount does so well, full of quips and sallies that prance side by side from start to finish. Joyously entertaining, you'll like the cast of screen experts and the manner in which they interpret the humour.

"Secrets of the French Police"

Murders, master detectives, hypnotism, abductions, and diabolically plotted "accidental" deaths, all spaced at breath-taking tempo, make "Secrets of the French Police" one of the best pictures of its kind ever screened or written. It is at the Central Theatre to-day. As taken from the memoirs of H. Ashton Wolfe, and combined with Samuel Orntz's amazing story, "The Lost Empress", this RKO-Radio Picture offers all the thrills possible to pack into an hour and a half of screen entertainment. Gwili Andre, as the lovely Paris flower girl, who is abducted by hypnotized, and presented as the Missing Princess Anastasia of Russia, fulfils all the promise she revealed in her early pictures. Gwili Andre, is considered by many to be the most beautiful woman on the screen to-day.

A newcomer makes his bow in "Secrets of the French Police." He is John Warburton, a handsome and able young leading man from England. Radio signed him to a five year contract as a result of his work opposite Miss Andre. That fact is adequate comment on his appearance and his abilities.

Religious Film.

On Sunday morning at 11 a.m. the film showing the Exposition of the body of St. Francis Xavier will be screened at the Oriental Theatre (for one show only) which is definitely the last in Hongkong as Australia and America are anxiously waiting to see this interesting film and to hear Jean Armstrong personally give her account of all that happened at Goa in 1932, and also to explain her cure and conversion. This film will be shown under the kind patronage and in the presence of His Lordship Rev. H. Valtorta. Booking is open at Anderson's.

"The Painted Women"

Cocunut palms, bending over a pounding surf—coral reefs ringing the rocky islets—outrigger canoes—gaily coloured fish—marvellous sunsets—the haunting echoes of a Polynesian song across the water under a tropic moon—these make up more of the glamour and romance of the South Sea background of the new Fox picture, "The Painted Women" which opens at the King's Theatre shortly, with Spencer Tracy and Peggy Shannon in the leading roles. The daring work of the native pearl divers, a thrilling undersea battle with a giant octopus and the tom-pastious conflict of three men over the heart of one girl, who hated all men, are said to give the film its sensational flair of drama. The strong cast which supports Tracy and Miss Shannon includes William (Stage) Boyd, Irving Pichel, Haoul Rosellen, Herbert Mundin and Laska Winters. John Hyattone directed the production.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

SWEEP DISPUTE DECISION.

NEITHER CLAIMANT TO GET THE MONEY

The dispute over the allocation of the Second Prize in the South China Athletic Association 1932 Derby Sweep has been ended, by the committee set up to investigate the matter refusing to award the $30,000 involved, to either of the rival claimants. It is suggested that the money may eventually go to charity.

Thus has ended a long litigation outside of a legal Court but in which legal advice was sought by both parties, this resulting in a number of sittings during last March and April.

The termination of the case has not been without a piquant incident, in one of the contending parties suggesting that the money go to the Tung Wah Hospital Directors for charitable purposes.

The Claimants.

The two parties to the claim were Mr. Wong Yu, of the Lei Man Hing Kwok Knitting Factory of Yau-mat, and the Sun Sun Company, of 22, Des Voeux Road Central whose name, it was claimed, appeared on a ticket shared by a number of its employees.

Both parties claimed to have purchased the winning ticket, No. 18457, which they also claimed to have mislaid.

At the subsequent hearing of the conflicting claims, by the general body of the South China committee in the Association's room, evidence was adduced by both parties in an attempt to prove their ownership of the ticket.

At these hearings, Mr. Wong Yu was represented by Mr. H. B. L. Denny, of Messrs. Denny and Bowley, and the Sun Sun Company by Mr. F. C. E. Rendall of Messrs. Russ and Co.

At these sittings Mr. M. K. Lo, of Messrs. Lo and Lo was included in the Investigating Committee as a legal adviser.

Compromise Turned Down.

An offer during the hearing to split up the amount in dispute between the two claimants and so to end the affair was turned down by the Investigating Committee. The view of the Committee then was that they were preserving an open mind on the subject, but that while perfectly willing to hear all evidence brought by either party, they had in view a third possibility, namely, that it might be found neither party had a claim that could be legally sustained.

The proceedings concluded on April 11, when the Committee reserved its decision.

The Decision.

On Monday last, after an interval of two and a half months, during which the fullest publicity was given to the proceedings in the hope of a further denouement, the long-awaited decision was made known.

In a letter to the solicitors of the parties, Mr. M. K. Lo advises that the Committee after very carefully considering the matter, have reached the conclusion that neither of the claimants was the owner of the winning ticket on the evidence adduced, and the Committee have unanimously decided against the claim of both sides.

RUSSO-JAPANESE QUARREL.

COMPLICATIONS ARISE OVER SHOOTING

Tokyo, June 28. Little progress is being made in the negotiations between Japan and Soviet Russia regarding the alleged shooting of three Japanese fishermen by Soviet coastguards, near Koronotsky, Cape Kamchatka, on June 15 last.

The Japanese Government demands that the Soviet punish the officials responsible, pay an indemnity to the families of the victims and make a formal apology to the Japanese Government.

M. Sokolnikoff, Assistant Foreign Commissar, promised that every facility would be given to the Japanese Consul, Mr. Noguchi, who is investigating the affair on the spot, adding that Mr. Noguchi might proceed to Koronotsky aboard the Japanese guardship, Kinshi Maru. The local Ogpu, however, have refused to permit the Kinshi Maru to touch at Koronotsky.

Singular Case.

The killing of the three Japanese fishermen is a singular incident, in that no reason whatever has been given for the action.

According to reports, the men were engaged in securing a fresh supply of water ashore. They had come from a fishing trawler, the Funi Maru, in a small boat. They were shot to death on the beach by unidentified persons.

So heavy was the fire that it was impossible for their shipmates on the Funi Maru to go to their assistance, according to the Japanese version of the affair.

A Japanese destroyer rushed to the scene, and a landing party found the three bodies, bullet-riddled, on the shore.—Reuter

VERANDAH CRASH TRAGEDY

INQUEST OPENED TO-DAY

ARCHITECT ON THE JURY

An investigation into the causes of the verandah collapse at 15, Yuk Sau Street, Happy Valley on June 3 opened this afternoon when the inquest on Cheng Hui, an amah, and Jessie Honson, aged 11, victims of the collapse was commenced.

Mr. Schofield sat as Coroner and Mr. Colbourne Little, architect of Messrs. Little, Adams and Wood, Mr. R. A. Rodgers (foreman) and Mr. Li Koon-chun were empanelled as the special jury.

Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K.C., instructed by Messrs. Woo and Nash, appeared for the contractors, Messrs. Wang Tak & Co., Mr. H. J. Armstrong was for the architect, Mr. A. J. Lane, and Mr. M. K. Lo appeared on behalf of the owner of the house, Mr. S. J. Honson.

NO BIAS.

After the jury had been selected, Mr. Lo, addressing the Bench, said that there was no possible suggestion of bias against Mr. Little, but he felt that Mr. Little would be placed in an embarrassing position, being an architect himself. They had no objection to his serving on the jury. It was an inquiry into the cause of death and the result might depend on particular evidence as to the particular construction of the verandah.

Mr. Lo did not object to his serving, but thought he ought point that out.

Mr. Jenkin:—I associate myself entirely with Mr. Lo's remarks, sir.

Mr. Armstrong:—I should like to do the same.

His Worship:—I quite see the point, of course.

QUITE INDIFFERENT.

Mr. Lo added their position was nothing more than this. If Mr. Little liked to apply for exemption, and his Worship had right to exempt him, his Worship could do so.

Mr. Little:—I am quite indifferent, sir.

Mr. Schofield:—I think that that will settle the question.

Addressing the Jury, the Coroner pointed out there were three questions to consider, namely,

(1) what caused the collapse,

(2) was anyone responsible for the collapse if so, who,

(3) can or should any measures be taken to prevent such collapses in the future?

Dr. R. S. Begbie, Government medical officer, was the first witness called.

LUAN TUNG TROUBLE

FEARS OF TRUCE BREACH

BOTH SIDES MAKE ACCUSATIONS

Peking, June 29.

Charges and counter-charges by the Chinese and Japanese authorities are giving rise to fears of further trouble in North China.

The administration of the Luan Tung district is the source of friction.

"Manchukuo irregulars have established themselves in the region and are claiming independence from the Hopen Provincial Government, while the Japanese are asking why the railway between Peking and Shanhai-kwan has not been re-opened."

Indicative of the Chinese feeling is the declaration yesterday that the Tangku truce does not make provision for the permanent prohibition of Chinese troops from entering the so-called neutral zone. The statement is regarded as significant and there is a fear that if an early settlement of the dispute is not soon reached, a breach of the truce will occur.—Special.

Probate of the will of Ida Maude Caldwell Armstrong, a librarian, late of No. 1, Robinson Road, Victoria, has been granted to John Hennessy Seth, Des Voeux Road Central. Deceased died in the Matilda Hospital on March 23, this year, and left local estate sworn under $47,100.

Chan Chung-toi, alias Chin Jim-chun, merchant, late of 723, King Street, Seattle, Washington, died intestate on April 5, 1932, leaving local estate of $13,000. Letters of administration have been granted to his widow, Chan Mui-shi, of Nathan Road, Hongkong.

Letters of administration to the estate of Bak Foo alias Kwan Fung, of 1 Cheung Sha Wan Road, Hongkong, have been granted to his brother Fung Kwan-tai, of the same address. Formerly a trader in Cuba, deceased retired a few years ago and died intestate last Christmas Day leaving local estate valued at $19,100.

PROBLEMS OF CHINA

HOT-HOUSE EXPANSION OF INDUSTRY

LONDON FEARS

London, June 29.

The rehabilitation of silver is the subject of special reference in The Times to-day.

The journal publishes telegrams exchanged by the British Chamber of Commerce and the China Associations in Shanghai and London on the silver question, arising from the Shanghai Chamber's resolution of June 17.

The City Editor of The Times, outlining the effect of the low price of silver since the war, observes that the effect of the low exchange value of China's currency is causing China to industrialise herself.

He points out that the danger of this industrial development continuing so that other countries find themselves in competition with a country with a very low standard of living must be obvious.

HOTHOUSE GROWTH.

The advocates of the rehabilitation of silver contend that a rise in the price of silver would, by improving the standard of living in China prevent such a hot-house growth of industry and by increasing the purchasing power of the Far East, would increase the demand for foreign goods and thus cause a rise in the price of other commodities.

Unless, however, there is an outlet for silver among the Western gold-using nations or rather, unless the present outlet is increased, there will be a check to the possible absorption of silver by gold countries. Hence the suggestion that more monetary use should be made of silver by nations generally.—Reuter.

BUYING UP U.S. COTTON

LOAN TO SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE

Washington, June 28.

The Reconstruction Corporation has advanced $870,000,000 to Mr. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture to buy all the cotton now in the hands of the Federal Farm Board and other Government agencies, totalling, it is estimated, about 2,000,000 bales.

The cotton thus acquired will be used for granting options to producers who agree to reduce their cotton acreage.—Reuter.

FEWER WORKLESS IN AMERICA

NO EVIDENCE OF START OF RECOVERY

Washington, June 28.

According to statistics issued by the American Federation of Labour more than 600,000 unemployed have found work since March.

However, the Federation appends the following warning: "Cheerful as this sounds, there is no evidence yet that it marks the start of a recovery."

There were altogether 12,780,000 still unemployed at the beginning of May.—Reuter.

Details in Page Eight.

THE CANTON STRIKE

HOPES OF EARLY SETTLEMENT

B. & S. TAIYUAN TURNS BACK

The B. and S. steamer Taiyuan, arriving in Canton from Shanghai, returned to Hongkong yesterday without discharging cargo, according to a report from Canton.

It is stated that the strikers of the s.s. Fatshan have received monetary support from Shanghai and other unions in the north.

The suggestion is made, however, that the possibility of a speedy termination of the strike has emerged as a result of the efforts at mediation by the Hongkong Chinese Chamber of Commerce. The strike leaders declare their willingness to receive representatives of the Hongkong merchants to discuss the issues. They indicate that they are making no exorbitant demands.

TIN YAT THREATENED.

The possibility of another development of the unfortunate affair is revealed by a report that the strike leaders have sent letters to the s.s. Tin Yat demanding an explanation and an apology regarding the alleged spreading of rumours by the compradore staff. It is stated that if an apology is not forthcoming, the activities of the strikers will be extended to the Tin Yat, a Chinese-owned steamer running between Hongkong and Canton.

INDUSTRIALISTS PROTEST

UNFAIR COMPETITION OF FOREIGNERS

London, June 28.

A petition was to-day presented in the House of Commons by members of the Manchester Royal Exchange, representing all branches of the cotton industry, asking the Government to prevent exploitation of Empire markets by foreign nations, who not only excluded British goods by high tariffs and quotas, but made it impossible for producers in this country to compete owing to the basis of wages paid, even though the manufacturers here were equipped with the most up to date machinery and employed the most modern methods.—British Wireless.

THE RAINFALL

In the twenty-four hours ended at 10 a.m. to-day 0.83 inch of rain was registered at the Royal Observatory, bringing the total for the year to 20.87 inches, against an average of 38.47 inches.

H. G. N. LEE BEATS McGRATH

EXCITING GAME

London, June 28.

Wimbledon's chief characteristic—unexpected results—was again prominently identified with to-day's programme, and the huge crowds which gathered round the courts saw plenty to sustain their interest.

Seeded players made astonishing exits from the various events, the two outstanding examples being the elimination of Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill, the American "seeded" pair in the men's doubles, and Mlle. Jedrejowska, the Polish champion, who was a ranked contestant in the women's singles.

The latter succumbed to a comparatively unknown German girl, Fr. Horn, losing in straight sets in the third round.

A third surprise was the defeat of Miss Virginia Rice, the American girl, who went out to another little known player.

THRILL OF DAY.

But undoubtedly the greatest thrill of the day was provided by the Australian victory over America, in which Adrian Quist and D. P. Turnbull beat Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill, American doubles champions, in a wonderful five set match.

The result was made all the more remarkable by the fact that the Australians lost the first two sets. But it was noticeable that during this period they were gradually tuning themselves up, and in the next three sets indulged in fireworks which not only caught the Americans off their guard, but swept them off the court.

Launching an attack which Vines and Gledhill found impossible to counter or to defend against, Quist and Turnbull made tracks for the net and from there bombarded their way into the second round with a succession of mighty kills and superb volleys.

A COLLAPSE

The defeat of Mlle. Jedrejowska stupefied the onlookers almost as much as the failure of Perry the day before. The Polish champion, who by her earlier achievements in England this year, had earned such high praise from the critics as well as a place in the list of "seeded" competitors, literally collapsed against Fraulein Horn and was beaten in an amazingly easy way.

Britain scored one or two good victories. H.G.N. Lee, Britain's No. 3 player, overcame Vivian McGrath, and that he did so in three sets with the loss of but eight games, shows very clearly how well the Englishman played.

He was McGrath's master, the Australian being unable to make any headway against the well ordered and cleverly effected net attack of Lee.

MISS STAMMERS THROUGH

Miss Kathleen Stammers, regarded in many quarters as one of the most serious challengers to Helen Wills Moody, entered the third round of the women's singles when she overcame Mrs. Strawson in straight sets.

Miss Betty Nuthall was another second round winner, beating Miss M. A. Thomas in a very convincing manner.

Miss Margaret Scriven, the girl player of the moment, had a three set match with Mrs. L. A. Godfree before clinching the issue and finding her way into the third round.

Gallant Genton, who the previous day had defeated Mr. Schofield in the first round, was an accomplice of the snatcher.

Vines and Gledhill, the American champions, defeated in the first round of the Open Doubles at Wimbledon yesterday.

"FOR SERVICES RENDERED"

MR. BENJAMIN TO GET T.L.S. 450,000

SHANGHAI LAND COMPANY

Shanghai, June 29.

The Shanghai Land Investment Company is proposing to pay a small fortune to Mr. Maurice Benjamin, the well-known Shanghai real estate owner, as remuneration for special services.

The amount involved is officially stated to be four hundred and fifty thousand taels.

The matter will come under discussion at a meeting of the Land Investment Company to be held on July 4 when a resolution will be submitted that the Directors be and are authorised to pay to Mr. Maurice Benjamin the sum of Tael 450,000 as remuneration for special services rendered by him to the Company, in accordance with a recommendation submitted to the Directors by the Committee of shareholders invited by the Board for considering the question.

It is expected that the resolution will be passed without opposition.

Mr. Benjamin was born in Shanghai in 1883 and his business interests have always been centred in the International Settlement. He was a member of the Shanghai Municipal Council in 1920 and 1921, when he was only 38 years of age.—Reuter.

ACCOMPLICE OF A SNATCHER

SENT TO PRISON FOR SIX MONTHS

Six months' hard labour was imposed by Mr. Schofield on a coolie who was charged with stealing a handbag from Mrs. Mynokeel Antile, a resident of Macao, at Stone Nullah Lane. Alternative charges of receiving and aiding and abetting were also preferred.

Sub-Inspector Nolloth said complainant was walking in Stone Nullah Lane yesterday afternoon, when a man, not in custody, came up from behind and snatched her handbag. She raised an alarm, and the man dropped the bag. Defendant, who was standing near by, picked up the bag and ran off with it. It was alleged he spoke to the snatcher. Defendant was arrested by Tang Chung, a painter, in Tai Yuen Lane.

In passing sentence, Mr. Schofield commended Tang Chung for his prompt action, and remarked that apparently defendant was an accomplice of the snatcher.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

You'll Find This Difficult,
But Keep Right At It!

The cross-legged roll perfected... toes on floor over head.

By Jac Auer

You have been working on your thighs and hips, now you are ready for advanced stretching exercises.

Since you want a slender, supple form, you must work on your hips, thighs, abdomen and also on your spine and neck. This exercise gets at all of them.

Now roll back on your spine, at the same time pulling your legs up and stretching them over your head, toward the floor. Your objective is to have your feet touch the floor over your head, with your hands still holding onto them.

When you have touched the floor, or come as near to it as you can, the first time, hold it a second or two. Then bring your feet back, still holding on, and you will come to a sitting position again, hands still on feet, right where you started.

This exercise does more to break down the fat on your abdomen, your thighs and the back of your neck than any other exercise given. It is a composite of many exercises. It stretches right after muscles that need stretching, working on those that need limbering, and generally is simply fine for your circulation and system.

Don't despair if you can't touch the floor the first day. Few women can who haven't done the exercise before. But keep at it. The distance you make each day toward your goal is a measure in itself of your decrease in fat and increase in liness. Keep at it.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart.

Blemishes and blackheads are ugly words. But if you have them you may as well face the facts and then begin treatments to remedy the condition.

Blackheads, compared to pimples, blemishes or worse yet, acne, are fairly simple to deal with. Good plain soap and water used in conjunction with a rough wash cloth or a complexion brush goes far toward eliminating blackheads. As you probably know, large pores are the root of the evil. Dirt gets into them and causes blackheads. It is always necessary to know the cause if you are to get a satisfactory result from anything which has to do with the complexion.

First of all, wash your face briskly with a soapy wash cloth. Second, rinse it with hot water or apply steaming towels. Now place a piece of soft gauze over your index fingers and gently press out all the blackheads which come out easily. Rinse your face in ice water, rub on an astringent to close the pores and consider yourself well on the way to rid-dance of blackheads. Repeat this treatment every other night.

Never squeeze your face too vigorously. You are apt to injure the delicate tissues of the skin and leave permanent blemishes.

Pimples should be opened, after the same cleaning process as above, with a sterilized needle and then an antiseptic applied to them. If they persist in coming back see a doctor.

Your diet has a great deal to do with a beautiful, clear skin. Drink ten glasses of water a day, eat no fats or rich desserts, and see that you have plenty of fresh vegetables at least once a day.

APPETIZERS.

An important hotel has a real ideal which you can carry out when serving meals in your own home. Instead of a wisp of salad with a meal they put three or four dishes of appetizers on the table before the first course is served leaving them on until you are ready for dessert. One dish may contain pickles, another cottage cheese, while a third and fourth have jelly, olives, celery or anything else you have in the way of an appetizer.

YOUR CHILDREN.

Young Mothers—Neglectful?

By Oliver Roberts Barton

I like young parents. When I see a young woman wheeling a baby, looking more like his sister than his mother it warms my heart. Youth is the time to have families. And incidentally this depression is ruining the chances of our next generation of babies to have just such young parents, for marriage has been next to impossible for young people.

Not only that but there has been no money for Mary, 20, wedded to John, 23, to have any babies yet. However not all Marys nor Johns have waited. I see a number of these girl-mothers about.

Yet is a queer way nature has sometimes of producing her young. She puts her babies into the arms of mothers so young that they have not yet learned the word caution.

Babies "Take" a Lot

Perhaps it is best so. If mothers worried about everything the way grandmothers do they would be nervous wrecks. Little children would be even more hampered and inhibited than they are and the race would soon lose its spirit of adventure and enterprise.

Yet I believe the young mother is too prone to take her baby's safety too much for granted. She wants to see a movie and off she goes, baby too, to see John Barrymore push Lionel under the ice. She wants to shop, so baby goes along to pass on whether a blue serge suit or a gray fur-trimmed coat is more becoming to Mamma.

She has the crowd in and baby is up all evening, first on one lap and then another, enjoying the vicarious smokes of a hundred cigarettes and rumpling the cards in the dummy just when the player is deciding on a finesse.

Treated So Casually!

The little creature is taken so for granted, like a new puppy, or a knitting bag! He is just part and parcel of life to be trotted along everywhere and treated as casually as a basket of groceries.

It amuses me but it terrifies me. The strange part of it is that babies so treated are as good as gold meatly.

I believed that most of these little tykes are fed pretty regularly, because one thing that has sunk in of all the baby knowledge spread about, is the importance of right and regular feeding. And the chances are that although they may not sleep until midnight, they will see to it themselves that they get in some twelve to fifteen hours solid slumber out of the twenty-four.

But Not Neglected

Please do not mistake me. I do not imply that the average baby of the very young mother is neglected. He is usually as clean as a daisy and bathed well. His bath may be at any odd hour his mother can squeeze it in, but he's bathed just the same and kept happy and comfortable.

I do not mean either that all young mothers are casual. Many lean over backwards to see that their babies are "scientifically raised."

This, after all, is merely a comment without either a suggestion or criticism. We cannot change youth. It is always assertive, always acquisitive. When a baby appears in the picture, much as he is loved, he is not permitted to shut out the world, that is all.

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONNIE O'DARE, who is in love with DAN CALDWELL, local heir to a fortune, believes she is losing him to SANDRA LAWRENCE, supposed to be her friend. In spite of the attentions of CHARLES EUSTACE, handsome aviator, Monnie continues to pine for Dan. After neglecting her for sometime Dan again seems interested.

At a big party which Sandra gives Dan is making. There is a scene between Sandra and HETTY, her maid, who believes Sandra is "vamping" JAMES, the chauffeur.

CHAPTER XIX

"Oh, Mrs. Briggs! Mother's out in the yard. She's peeling peaches for jam."

The tall woman swished her way through the neat hall, with its oak stand harbouring three or four discouraged looking umbrellas. She passed through the kitchen, a critical view of the white shelves covered in blue oilcloth. Then out to the porch.

"Mrs. O'Dare! Oh, there you are. Just ran in for a minute."

The woman under the maple tree, away back and forth gently in the old rocker, looked up and smiled at the new-comer.

"Sit down—do!" She indicated a battered basket chair at her side. "Isn't it hot? I thought I'd do a bit of peeling. Doesn't seem to matter how hot it gets—I always feel the urge, long about this time."

"You have got energy!" The speaker eyed her hostess disconcertedly. "I'm all tuckered out myself. Walking from town, I just thought I'd come in and have a bit of gossip."

"I'm glad you did," Mrs. O'Dare said cordially, pushing aside a wooden bowl of parings and rising. "Just sit here in the shade a minute while I put these things on the stove. Then I'm all through. I'll bring out something cool to drink."

Her guest's half-hearted protest followed her into the shaded kitchen where, with a thoughtful frown, she consigned the ripe golden fruit to a blue enamel kettle, setting it over a low flame.

"What's that old holl-cat want?"

She looked up, her hand at her heart, to see her young son, attired now in bathing suit and dirty white slacks, signalling her from the doorway.

"Mark, you scared me. Don't talk that way."

"Well, she is that, isn't she? Always snooping into somebody's business."

Mrs. O'Dare shook her head reprovingly at him.

"I'm going down to the river with the kids, Mom. Be back about 6."

"Be careful, son."

He gave her a peck on the cheek and she heard him whistling down the path. Then she turned her attention to the cooling drink she had promised her visitor. Lemons were brought from the ice box and presently from green glasses a tinkling tune sounded.

Laura Briggs put her head back, sighing gustily. There were two parentheses etched at either side of her thin-lipped mouth. Her black hair was drawn back from a face which must, in its time, have been lovely, but which now bore the marks of illness and discontent.

"You oughtn't to go walking in the sun like that," said the gentle voice of the woman in blue gingham.

"It's bad for you."

"I know. I know," Laura Briggs was impatient. "But it's Rissy—I had to get the stuff for a dress she wants to wear Friday night, and she's at me all the time. Will couldn't drive me. He had to go up to the city."

She paused and her listener waited for the declaration which was sure to come. Laura Briggs never came to call unless she desired to unburden herself.

"How're all your folks?" the caller wanted to know.

Mrs. O'Dare put back a strand of curling hair before she answered. She was a pretty little woman, an elder replica of Monica. "They're fine," she assured Laura Briggs. "They're just splendid. How's Rissy?"

But it was plain the other had not come to discuss her daughter. Mark, reflected his mother, had been right. Laura had something on her mind. Well, whatever it was, she would hear it soon. She rocked to and fro, waiting.

"What's this we hear about Bill getting married?" demanded the newcomer with an arch smile.

"You're such a deep one, we never hear the real news from you."

The woman in the rocker showed no sign that the blow struck home. Her expression was still admirably placid, undisturbed.

"Well, you know Bill," she said lightly. "He's always had a lot of girls—but he's never really been serious. You don't mean Gertrude, do you?"

Mrs. Briggs sniffed disdainfully. Of course, she said, she didn't mean Gertrude. No, it was the other, that blonde from the Sweet Shoppe. Didn't Bill's mother know Bill's girl?

"I've met—such a lot of them," protested Mrs. O'Dare, pretending to brush away a cobweb, avoiding the sharp eyes of the other woman.

"I can't remember them all."

"Somehow," said Laura Briggs acidly, "I don't believe Bill's ever brought her to the house. You see, she paused to give her arrow its full flight, 'you see, this one's married.'"

"Married!" Edith O'Dare stammered over this. Then she was angry. She had always tried to see the best in Laura Briggs, had stood up for her when everybody else was furious at her, but this was really too much. Her Bill—and a married woman!

Coldly she said, "I think you must be mistaken. I'm sure you must." She rose to her feet, a small, flashing guardian of her home, an angry lion brooding over her mangled chicks. She waited, withdrawn and a bit disdainful, for her caller to make her adieu.

This Laura Briggs did rather badly. She was chagrined at the effect her news had made. What she had expected, she could not say. Tears, perhaps. Harsh words for the errant son, curiosity about the charmer, the blond siren. None of these would Mrs. O'Dare accord her. Crestfallen, she withdrew.

Left alone, the little mother stormed inwardly. Not that she believed there was a word of truth in the fantastic story, she assured herself angrily. And yet—and yet Bill had been spending a great amount of time away from home these days. His absences had been unexplained. Gertrude Hampstead had been very cool to Mrs. O'Dare whenever they had met; had, in fact, looked the other way, pretending not to see.

Bill—her boy—involved with a married woman! She groaned.

Suddenly she felt a little sick and faint. The heat of the day, the work she had been doing, and the blow she had just received, combined to defeat her. She was leaning against the door frame, looking white and ill, when Kay breezed in.

"Mums! What on earth's the matter?"

"It's nothing—I just—"

She put up her hand to her eyes, staggering in the bright kitchen.

Kay was thoroughly frightened. "Let me get you some water. Here, lie down on the sofa! That's better." Kay's face was sober now. She looked serious, responsible.

"I'm all right." Her mother sat up, setting her mouth firmly.

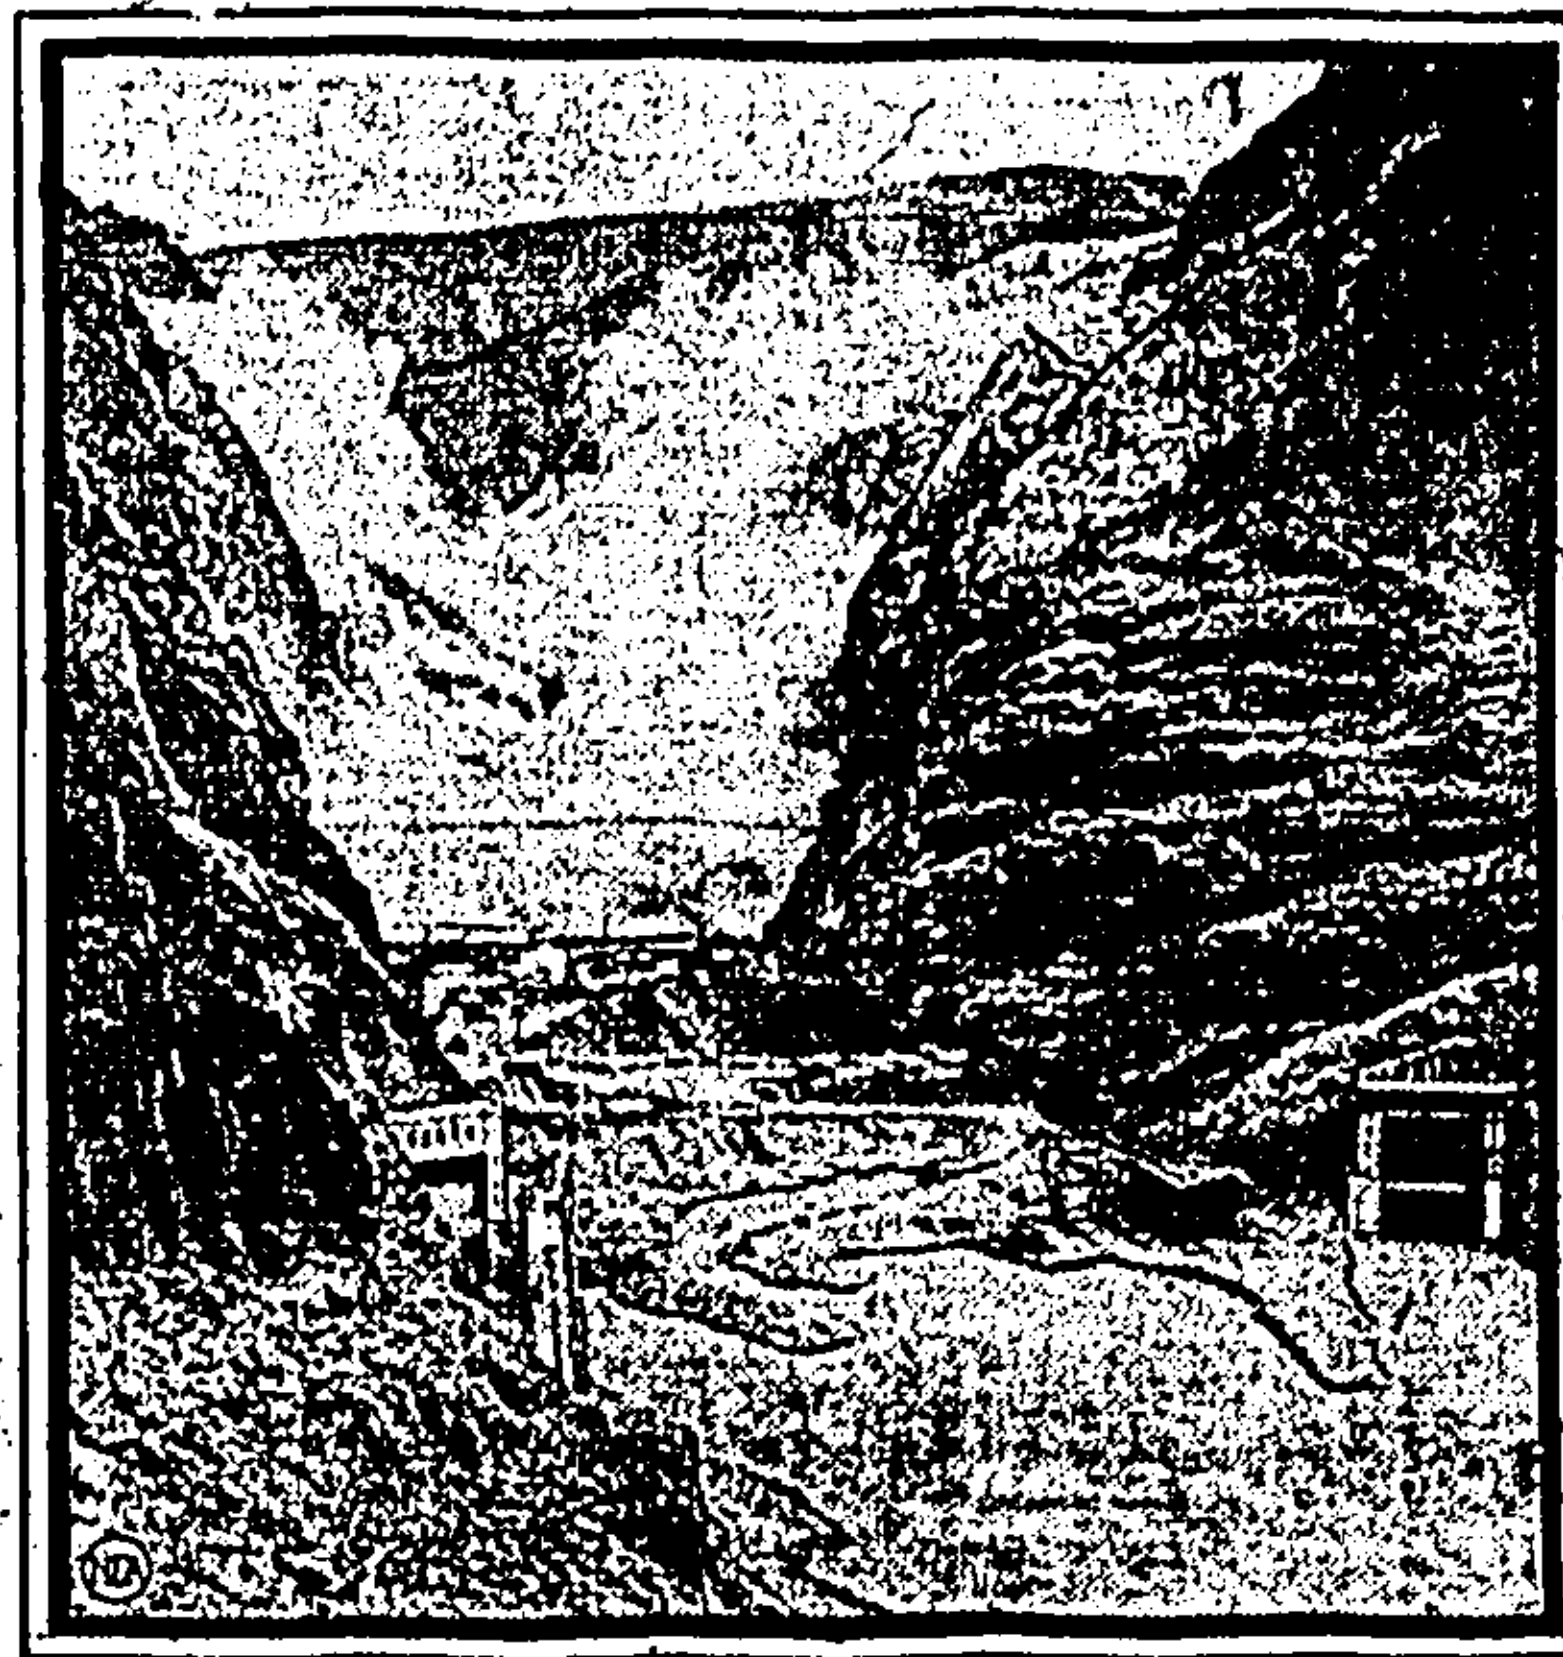

"It's only—tell me this, Kay. Is there any truth in the story about Bill and some married woman?"

"Oh, gosh!" Kay groaned, turning away. "Who told you?"

"I don't like being kept in the dark this way," protested the mother. "You all know—everybody in town knows, apparently—and only I am left out."

"Monnie thought it would worry you," Kay explained. "We thought, or hoped anyway, that it would all

Four tons of dynamite blasted away a mountain of dirt and rock, marking the last "big shot" before actual construction of Boulder Dam begins. The picture was taken as thousands of tons of rock fell into the Colorado river canyon. In the foreground may be seen the tunnels through which the river's flow has been diverted.

Dr. L. J. Stuart, President of the Yenching University at Peking, landed in Shanghai last week on his way back to the old northern capital after a visit to the United States during which he held conferences with President Roosevelt on the situation in the Far East. In the above picture he is seen facing the camera, in conversation with a friend.

Built in England, shipped to Shanghai in parts and re-assembled by the Kiangwan Dock and Engineering Works, the gunboat H.M.S. "Piper" was launched last week at the Kiangwan Dock. The picture, which was taken as the vessel was leaving the slip for the water, shows the fatness of her hull, she draws only two feet of water.

Protection from the sky-terror of lightning is the aim of Arthur O. Austin, inset at right, whose experiments led him to believe the menace has been conquered. At top, a scale model of the dirigible Akron showing "artificial lightning" entering the ship at the nose and leaping out harmlessly at the tail. Centre right, a three-foot model plane sustaining a stroke of 3,000,000 volts potential which enters at a wing-tip and leaves through the tail. Austin's work in this field at the laboratories of the Ohio Insulator Co., at Barberton, are the most hopeful of any in the world looking to the safeguarding of ships of the air from lightning.

Bomb-laden sky-wagons are dropping over southern California in the above picture, taken by the Air Service during a week of air activity to test the air defenses of the south Pacific coast. The Ninth Bombardment Squadron is shown hidden by clouds from Baldwin Hills below. Problems of protecting the naval oil reserve tanks and concealing grounded air corps planes from bombers were worked out.

EXCHANGEYESTERDAY'S MARKET FIRM

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was firm yesterday. Business done 5,510,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports: "The market was irregular with the exception of a dozen or so special issues in the 'wet' and railroad groups which advanced broadly. Active turnover in 'wet' issues was due to recent victories in California and West Virginia and in Illinois due to favourable earnings reports and anticipation of favorable carloadings. Profit-taking broke wheat prices."

Ironage Magazine reports: "Steel production advanced to 53% of capacity since March, being one of the sharpest recoveries in the industry's history mainly due to momentum automobile manufacturers' demand. The question now is how further output can be increased without business from the construction industry and railroads both of which heretofore were insignificant. The greatest problem is the uncertainty in new pending to the extent of impending wage advances. An increase of 10% in wages would raise costs from $2 to $5 per ton. Cable received from Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, New York: "Specialties still dominate the market with standard issues less inclined to respond to good trade news and showing advance. Caution seems advisable temporarily. Cotton: The Government's weekly cotton crop report is better than expected but general rains are needed. Rumours of the possibility of abandonment of the gold standard by the remaining European countries and increased demand for labour in the proposed textile reconstruction code in addition to our tax reference yesterday are causing uncertainty. Wheat: Prices opened sharply lower on sterling application process tax and overbought conditions. Rallies failed on prospects of rains in Canada and the Northwest."

ASSASSINATION PLOT FAILS

Shanghai, June 28. It is sensationally revealed in a case here that members of the Lytton Mission which investigated the Manchurian situation were marked for assassination, but escaped because no opportunity presented itself.

Four Chinese brought up in the District Court this morning all confessed that they participated in attempts on the lives of Lytton Commission members and of Mr. T. V. Soong, China's Finance Minister.

The attempted killing of Mr. Soong occurred in 1931, when he alighted from a train at Shanghai and the assassins opened fire. They also threw two bombs, but Mr. Soong was unhurt.

The accused declared when Lord Lytton and his colleagues arrived they trailed them but could find no opportunity to kill them. Questioned, the four said they were ordered by their superiors to kill Mr. Soong and the Lytton party, but they did not reveal who the superiors were.—Router Special.

JEWISH WORKERS

ALLOWED TO FORM THEIR OWN UNIONS

Berlin, June 28. No Jewish workers are entitled to join organized trade unions, according to an official statement, which adds that Jewish hand and brain workers are allowed to form their own organization not affiliated with the German Workers' Front, but Jews, once and for all, are excluded from all German organizations.—Router Special.

OBITUARY

DISTINGUISHED ENGINEER AND SOLDIER

Toronto, June 28.
A distinguished engineer and soldier, Major General William Bethune Lindsay, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., has just died here at the age of 53. He was unmarried and retired from some of his numerous activities a few years ago on account of ill-health.

Maj.-Gen. Lindsay was educated at the Royal Military College, Kingston, Canada, and became Assistant Engineer in the Department of Marine and Fisheries of the Federal Government. In 1904 he transferred to the Royal Canadian Engineers. At the outbreak of the war he carried out the task of organising, equipping, and training the 1st Canadian Divisional Engineers, and for his services through out the hostilities was awarded his three distinctions.

He was Major and O.C. 2nd Field Co. C.E.; Lt.-Col. and C. R. E. 1st Canadian Division, 1916; Brigadier General and Chief Engineer, Canadian Army Corps, 1917-8; Major General and G.O.C. Canadian Engineers, 1918.

On seven occasions, Maj.-Gen. Lindsay was mentioned in despatches.

Deceased was a member of the Engineering Institute, Canada, and of the Institution of Royal Engineers.—Our Own Correspondent.

AUSTRALIAN LADY.

Death Of Wife Of Local Tramway Official.

MRS. F. GLENDENNING.

We regret to have to announce the death, which occurred at the War Memorial Hospital yesterday, after a long and trying illness, of Mrs. Florence Edith Glendenning, wife of Mr. W. S. Glendenning, Outside Superintendent of the Hongkong Tramways, Limited. Deceased is survived by her husband and three children, a son Mr. Lyl Glendenning and the Misses Kathleen and Eavis Glendenning, to whom much sympathy will be extended in the heavy loss which they have been called upon to bear.

Mrs. Glendenning hailed from Sydney, Australia, and was married in October, 1912. She had been residing in the Colony for nearly twenty-one years, and about a year ago returned with

ANOTHER DENIAL.

SPANISH AIRMEN NOT YET FOUND

Mexico City, June 28.
Despite official declarations that the bodies of the Spanish transatlantic flyers had been found, it is now learned that the story is unfounded. Its originator has been arrested.—Reuter.

It was reported that the two Spanish aviators, Capt. Barbaran and Lieut. Collart, heroes of a 5,000 mile flight across the Atlantic, had been found dead in their plane's wreckage, just west of Carmen Campeche. This information came to the authorities on Monday, after an earlier report of their death had been denied.

The fate of the two airmen still remains a mystery.

her husband and family from a holiday trip to Australia. Though she had been ailing for a long period, it was only recently that she entered hospital.

The funeral takes place this afternoon, passing the Monument at 5.30.

SYDNEY C. GRIER.

Woman Who Wrote For Two Generations.

REAL NAME WAS GREGG.

London, June 28.
Known to thousands through her prolific writing over 60 years, Sydney C. Grier's death at the age of 65 is at once a loss to the literary profession and to the readers of two generations.

The nom de plume concealed the identity of Miss Gregg of Gloucestershire, who, after taking her B.A. degree, and spending some years in teaching, found her meter in short stories and novels.

Her first accepted effort was published in a local newspaper and eight years later she made her debut as a novelist through the medium of "In Furthest Ind." Among her works were "The Warden of the Marshes," "A Young Man Married," and "The Keepers of the Gate." During the War she published "The Rearguard," "England Hath Need of Thee," "The Kingdom of Waste Lands." In 1905 she edited "Letters of Warren Hastings to his Wife."

Her books appeared at regular intervals up to 1925 when "A Brother of Girls" marked the termination of her long and valued authorship.—Our Own Correspondent.

DARLING FOOL

blow over. Bill," said Kay, "has girls before this—"

"N-no," Kay admitted that. "I guess not. Honestly, she's not a bad sort, Mother. She was married to this man when she was only 16. He's no good, I hear, and she's been supporting him. You can't blame her for wanting a divorce."

"I can't blame her for anything," Mrs. O'Dare said steadily. "It's only that— She could not finish the sentence. Bill, her Bill, mixed up in such an affair! She had hoped for great things for Bill, ever since he was a little boy. When his father died and he had had to leave school her heart had ached for him. He was so bright, so earnest. He had a fine mind, with a mechanical turn. She had wanted college for him, wanted him to forge ahead, and now—this! He would be stamped for life as 'the fellow who walked off with another man's wife.' The circumstances did not matter. The bare facts only would be remembered.

She was a self-controlled woman. All her children knew and appreciated that fact. But now her calm almost deserted her. It had been a hard year. Monnie's palpable unhappiness, Kay's discontent—these things had borne themselves in upon her. And now this! She dashed the unwilling tears from her eyes. Kay watched as she picked up the telephone.

"Mother! What are you going to do?"

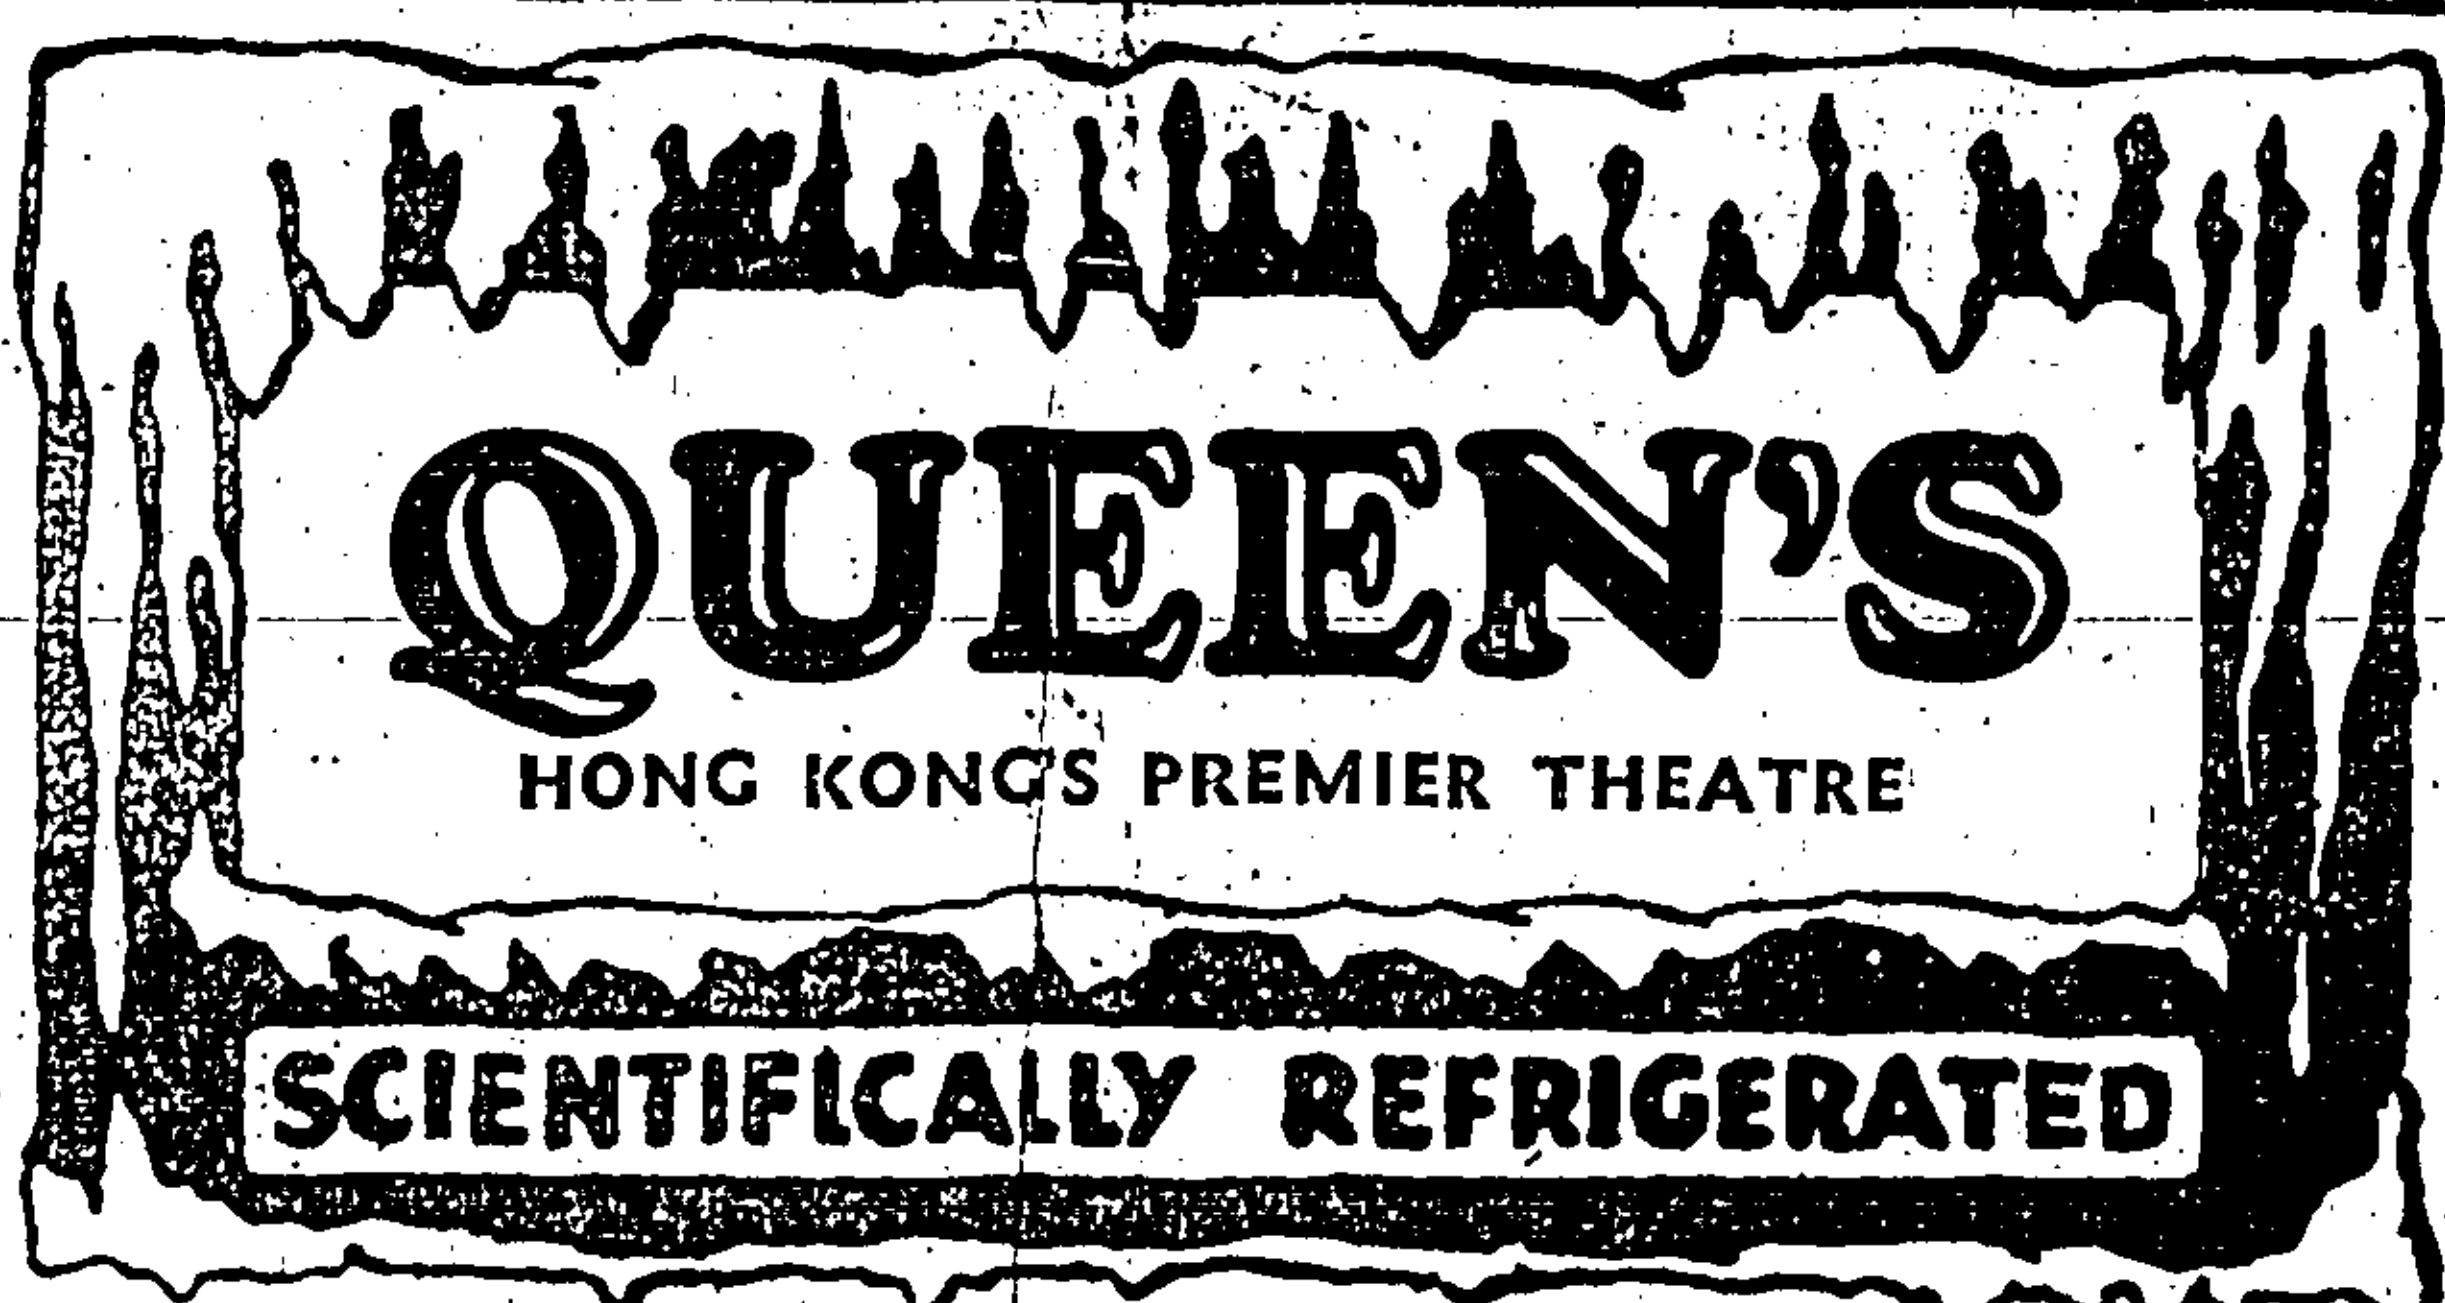

"Do?" She lifted her head proudly. "I'm going to ask Bill to bring this girl to see me, of course. I must know the girl my son plans to marry."

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1933.

THE FINANCIAL OCTOPUSThe enquiry into the gigantic financial operations of the famous firm of J. P. Morgan and Company having concluded, the U.S. Senate Banking Committee has begun upon Kuhn, Loeb and Company, though it is difficult to see what good purpose is likely to be served. A little more scope for the scandal sheets may be provided, but essentially, the evidence is not likely to provide anything more than the existence of the system and practice similar to that governing the affairs of the House of Morgan.
Sufficient has already been revealed to justify severe restrictions. The "sensations" when analysed merely illustrate the contentions of opponents of the existing order of society that the control of human affairs exercised by such concerns is damaging to the interests of the community as a whole. Judged by the most modern economic theory, daily gaining adherents, the facts are self-condemnatory. Judged by ordinary every-day standards, they are disturbing enough. There is the unpleasant implication, for instance, that the effect of the favours granted by the House of Morgan to certain influential men has put them under an obligation, liable to influence their attitude in affairs involving the public welfare. As explained by Mr.
Morgan and his partners, the transactions appear a reasonably natural one, disposing of issues acquired as an incident to other activities. And it certainly would have taken unusual presence even for a Morgan partner to have told in 1929 that Mr.
William H. Woodin would to-day be Secretary of the Treasury.
Yet the existence of these practices is fraught with serious possibilities where disinterestedness is so vital as in government. The deals, if they have its unpleasant connotations in financial etiquette, illustrate a type of practice that is not confined to Wall Street nor to any one line of business. It is thepractice of giving favoured treatment to one set of buyers as compared with another, of making special discounts, and seeking special advantages, of using outside inducements, to build up trade. How many of those who will wag their heads at the Morgan disclosures will refrain from seeking out a friend through whom to buy a rug or a refrigerator at a "wholesale" price? Oil companies have seen the wisdom of attempting at least to root out the giving of undeserved discounts or of making the discount a plain price cut which the whole public could enjoy. Retail stores have taken steps to curb some abuses of accounts. It does not lend dignity to the securities market or the investment banker to picture issues of speculative stocks being passed out to customers and friends in much the way a grocery might give away kewpie dolls or roller skates as premiums to children. To reach the particular situation pointed out in the securities business by legislation would seem difficult.
The American Government might undertake to require that when a stock is listed on an exchange all sales of it shall be made through the exchange.
This could be enforced only by prohibiting any other transfers to be made on the books of the company, and such a regulation could be made only under a federal chartering law. There are other and better reasons for such a law. But the exchanges themselves can take action against such abuses. If they value public confidence they will make regulations under which the public may know there have been no sales of a stock to insiders or may know on what terms they have bought. Investors with whom the testimony of recent financial investigations has sunk in will demand that investment bankers' offices be made "one price" stores. In such a market there would be little or no opportunity for the type of "ground floor" operations that is now under discussion. The surest defence against advantage-seeking abuses in all branches of business is the development of a sense of honour and justice that will neither offer nor accept any special or insinuating favours.Police Changes in LondonThe decision of the British Government to effect important changes in the organization of the London police could hardly fail to arouse as much controversy as interest. For his admirable body of disciplined men, though constantly subject to criticism, is on the whole extremely popular among the general public. There has undoubtedly been much exaggeration in the British press about the increase of crime. Murder and attempts to murder have steadily diminished throughout the last thirty years. Assaults, cruelty, malicious damage, drunkenness and many other offences are far fewer. The most serious increase has been in crimes against property, such as burglary, larceny and fraud, often accompanied by violence, and committed by criminals of a new type, men of cunning and energy, using automobiles, telephones and mechanisms of their own devising. To deal with criminals of this kind a far more elaborate police machine has become necessary. Trained intellects are required to direct its services both at headquarters and at local centres. The main object of the proposed reforms is to provide a directing staff of highly educated and specially trained men.
To provide men suitable for these posts a police college is to be established where selected candidates will be trained for two years. Opponents of the reforms see in them an attempt to militarize the police, and to introduce Fascist influences.THE KING'S ENGLISH IN THE KING'S STATUTES

By His Honour Sir EDWARD PARRY.

The use of the King's English in the King's Statutes is both extensive and peculiar. Every one agrees that too many words are used, and litigation continually reminds that the words that are used are often peculiarly unfortunate, and fail to explain what was at the back of the author's mind and what he intended when he wrote them down.Perhaps we want a statutory editor, armed with a stalwart editorial blue pencil and the power to strike out from the proofs of the statutory drafts presented to him anything that he did not understand himself, or thought might be embarrassing and irrelevant to the general reader.We certainly ought to have some system whereby statutes are so drafted that High Court Judges could readily understand their intention. On May 3, for instance, we read that the Lord Chief Justice, assisted by Mr. Justice Avory and Mr. Justice Humphreys, spent a merry May morning puzzling over the meaning of the words
"special occasions" in the Road Traffic Act, 1930. The words occurred in one place by themselves, and in another in the phrase "race meetings and other like special occasions."There were quite a lot of appeals about the meaning of these words, and they came from rural Cornwall.
It seems that in some cases the magistrates had held that "special occasions" included weekly cattle fairs. Now to an ox who goes to a weekly fair, on his last journey towards the slaughter house, this is a very "special occasion." But to the farmer who takes him there, or the butcher who meets him there, it is merely a weekly incident arising out of and in the course of their employment. Even the Solicitor-General, who appeared for the statute, so to speak, agreed that a weekly cattle fair was not a "special occasion."Now in the earliest statutes of which we have any knowledge the language is clear and direct.
"Thou shalt not steal" could not trouble the minds of the dullest Justice of the Peace, and most Clerks to the Justices that I have met could easily explain to the Bench whether there was evidence upon which the Bench might convict the prisoner of stealing.Vast legal treatises have been written about grand and petit larceny, and the doctrine of "asportation," and the animus furandi; but it all comes back to this—Are you sure that man intended to steal? Then, if he did, you must deal out certain punishments to him. The statute "Thou shalt not steal," with a schedule of punishments the judge may award for stealing, is practically all you want to-day.I am not sure that when we find a statute has been so drafted as to prevent its intention being carried out, we should not to-day allow the House of Lords to amend it. The words "arising out of and in the course of his employment" were used by old-fashioned judges who talked the theory of the Workmen's Compensation Act, in order to deprive workmen and their dependants, whom they left behind if death ensued, of the benefits they were entitled to.The way they tried to misread a somewhat awkward and careless phrase was to suggest that a man must prove that at the moment of the accident he was actually doingsomething "arising out of his employment." At last a case occurred in which a man in a colliery was killed in trying to stop a runaway horse. He was not, of course, employed to stop runaway horses; so it did not arise out of his employment, but it clashed with A. L.
Smith's sense of justice that the widow should not draw the insurance money and he invented a doctrine of acts done in an emergency to meet the case.For some time arbitrators and the Court of Appeal did not administer the Act correctly. They drew nearer and nearer to the conclusion that the mere fact that the man was injured by accident disentitled him to compensation, for obviously no man is employed to have accidents in his master's time.But for the House of Lords, the Court of Appeal of that date would have ruined the scheme of the Act.
It was the good and out-spoken common-sense of Lord Halsbury that saved the situation. He could not peddle about propositions of "scope of employment," and the rest; but told the Court of Appeal that "the broad proposition, of course, was that there should be compensation given to every workman in certain trades, when an injury happened to him in the course of his employment." Lord Lindley informed the world that the results arrived at in the Court of Appeal were "startling and untenable."These were hard days for County Court Judges who, under the absurd statute, were unpaid arbitrators under the Act. When they followed the right interpretation of the Act they were treated with contempt in the Court of Appeal; but if, as usually happened, the case went to the House of Lords it was pleasant to hear what Lord Hals-bury, Lord Davey, and others had to say about it all when they set things right.It is curious how people who have to draft statutes, decrees, and orders for the regulation of the affairs of the simple citizens glory in periphrastic obscurity. I remember in the Pensions days Sir Stephen Demetriadi, who did good voluntary work for the Department during the War, showing me a paper he had to send out to a seaman or stoker claiming an allowance for his wife. In it there were many obscure alternatives, but I will only quote the last: "or if his full pay and allowances in the nature thereof exceed 22s. 6d. a week is not less than the weekly excess of such full pay and allowances over 21s., provided that if the excess be not an exact multiple of 6d. it shall be not less than the precise multiple of 6d. next below such excess."One wonders what the men on the lower deck thought of this jargon when it reached them. For it is jargon, as Sir Arthur Quiller Couch pointed out to us in the "Art of Writing." Unfortunately, jargon seems embedded in the brains of the politicians, the Civil Service, and those who draft, edit and publish our statutes.Even a great Minister cannot say "No" to a simple question, but replies that "the answer is in the negative." And Sir Arthur points out that if your language be jargon, your intellect will almost certainly correspond, and where, your mind should go straight will dodge.
For, as he truly says, the Style is the Man, and where a man's treasure is, there his heart, and his brain, and his writing will be also.

The Very Idea!

WHAT THE DICKENS!

By Eddie Pickwick Kelly.

AS this is the time of the year when all our thoughts turn to Christmas, we have decided to write an appropriated story. It will be all about a man named Scrooge. Scrooge was a bad man. Which was a bad thing.He sat before the crackling fireplace, thinking, thinking, thinking, etc.It was Christmas Eve. And he was alone in the great, silent room.Suddenly he heard voices, children's voices, singing beautiful Christmas carols, which led him back to his own childhood days.
He listened while the voices faded,
then they faded into the distance, and old Scrooge was again alone with his reveries.He was a sick man, and he knew it. He was getting too old to go out on binges with Edward Kelly.
That last one had nearly settled him. He coughed several times, hands trembling. Outside the wind fell and the snow howled, while inside the Telegraph office Edward Kelly wiped the perspiration from his brow and paused to think.Editor's note: Get on with the story.Eddie's note: Say, you, who's got to make this thing long enough to fill a column?"I must go to her to-night, even though I perish," he exclaimed suddenly.He was thinking of the Widow Pounds, and her four young children, who lived out at Kowloon Tong. She was a poor woman who washed for a living.Editor's note: Do only poor women wash?Eddie's note: Yes, during the water restrictions.Her husband had died five years previously of alcoholic poisoning, through drinking heavenly.Editor's note: The author means drinking heavily.Eddie's note: The Editor is a teetotaler.Old Scrooge was very wealthy.
He had been a selfish old man now for nearly seventy years. At last, it appeared, he was going to do a decent, kindly act.A gust of wind nearly upset him as he opened the front door, and the sun beat fiercely upon his graying head. Old Scrooge was seized with another dreadful fit of coughing.The weather was even more severe than he had anticipated.
His feet were numb and his frail
of the blizzard. The wind shrieked louder and louder. Blinded by snow, he staggered on and on.More alive than dead, he finally recognised the single, fluttering light of the Widow Pound's house.Somehow, he reached the door and beat it feebly with his numb fist—then darkness came.Editor's note: Suppose he fainted from sunstroke?Eddie's note: No. The sun had set.When he awoke, he recognised the four little pinched faces about him. He noticed the shabby, poverty stricken house, and shuddered. He still felt cold.The Widow Pound's gentle voice reached his half-frozen ear."Why—why did you come to visit us on such a night, Mr.
Scrooge?"The old man feebly extended his bony hand."I have come," he said simply,
"for the rent."

Kelly's Tests For Civil Servants.

We suggest the following task in the next examination for civil servants. Nowadays, thanks to the frank publicity that attaches to American film stars, non-stop revue, and illustrated lingerie advertisements, there is no longer even any pretence of mystery about a lady's undies. Will any sane, unprejudiced citizen advance the theory that the average man, though he is turned out in all his sartorial strata by Row and New Bond Street, is a graceful or pretty spectacle in his vest and underpants? Such an object of aesthetic ridicule he looks, in fact, that the wonder is he still attracts enough romance to qualify as actor in a divorce suit.A woman in similar undress, however, judging by all the available evidences, still looks both fascinating and coquettish. Explain this.

"Remarkable woman—has a mind as good as most men."

MANCHUKUO PROTEST TO THE SOVIET

ISHII-HULL TALKS NO CLUE REGARDING THE SUBJECT

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, June 28.
Viscount Ishii, the Japanese leader, had a long conversation to-day with Mr. Cordell Hull, the American Secretary of State.

In an interview with Reuters later, Mr. Cordell Hull said that the talk was confined to trade matters to various points upon which the two countries are in agreement.

He declared that there were, relatively, no new developments in the Conference as far as the American delegation was concerned.

SUGAR PROBLEMS.

London, June 28.
In the sugar sub-commission, Sir Philip Cunliffe Lister supported the object of the Cuban proposal that the working committee should examine the whole subject of international limitation. He resisted the proposal that the construction of new factories should be forbidden and said there were administrative and legislative difficulties in the tariff proposals in Cuban plan. The Cuban delegate said the reservations destroyed the plan but Sir Philip declared readiness to cooperate heartily in its prime objects.

TARIFF ISSUES.

General conventions and multi-lateral agreement to effect tariff modifications, instead of bilateral agreements were advocated by the delegates of Belgium, Norway and the Netherlands in the commercial policy sub-commission of the Conference. Prolongation of the tariff truce and a return to the widest possible measures of free trade were urged by the Japanese delegate.

The special sugar committee which has been set up began its deliberations immediately after electing Signor Damato (Portugal) as chairman.

The discussion is expected to last several days before a report is ready for admission to the Economic Sub-Commission Two.

ALLEGED PALMING OF FORGED NOTES

Passenger Said to Have Been Victimised

How two men palmed two ten guilder forged notes in exchange for $40 in Foochow money on a Chinese passenger on the a.s. Tjondari bound for the Dutch East Indies, was related before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Sub-inspector O'Donovan charged Ngai Hak-kau with having feloniously uttered two ten guilder bank notes of the Government of the Dutch East Indies at 317, Des Voeux Road on June 13, and Kong Sau-kwong was charged with aiding and abetting.

DEAL IN A CAFE.

Outlining the facts of the case, the prosecuting officer stated that the complainant was passing through Hongkong from Foochow. On the arrival of the steamer in Hongkong, he went to live in a boarding house, and met the defendants in the sampan taking them ashore. The complainant got into conversation with the defendants and another man, Chan Mul-tai, and the defendants asked him whether he was going to Java. Complainant replied in the affirmative, and the men spoke about exchanging money.

On landing near the Harbour Office, the first defendant invited the complainant to the Empress cafe, and there, over coffee, asked complainant whether he wanted to exchange money. Complainant said he had no money on him, but went back to the boarding house, and returned with $40 in Foochow money. The first defendant gave him in exchange two ten guilder notes and seven pieces of silver. The complainant accepted the change as being correct exchange.

Later, he consulted a friend at the boarding house, and as a result went to a money changers shop and was told that the two notes were

ROUNDING-UP OF REFUGEES

ALLIANCE WITH REBELS

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1921. Received June 29, 2.55 a.m.)

Harbin, June 29.
Another ground of discord between Manchukuo and the Soviet has been discovered in the report, from Japanese sources, that six Soviet cavalrymen crossed the Manchukuo frontier in the vicinity of Tai pingchen the day before yesterday.

It is stated that they crossed some twenty miles to the south of Tungning, lodged for the night with a Korean and the following morning rounded up seven Soviet civilian refugees from the U.S.S.R. They then returned to Soviet territory with their captives.

It is also alleged by the Japanese that four hundred anti-Manchukuo forces operating in the same district are connected with the Red Army and receive monetary rewards from the Soviet authorities when they hand over refugees.

This frontier zone policy of the Red Army is regarded as detrimental to the peace and order and prestige of Manchukuo. Manchukuo is therefore presenting a serious protest.

MOSQUES AFIRE

KASHMIR RIOTING QUELLED

Simla, June 28.

In the conflagrations following the communal rioting which broke out at Mirpur to-day, both Hindus and Moslems forgot for a while their differences and jointly fought the flames that were destroying three mosques.

Kashmir State troops promptly suppressed the rioting, to the general relief of the inhabitants on account of the proximity of Mirpur to the Punjab frontier and memories of the fierce rioting two years ago, when British troops occupied the district for nine months.

forgeries. The complainant happened to a money changer's shop and went to his address at 134, Connaught Road West. While he was talking to Chan, a detective came up, and Chan took them to 38, Connaught Road, West, where they found the two defendants. According to the rate of exchange that day, the $40 Foochow currency was worth 22 guilders and 40 cents, and the complainant had really received 23 guilders.

FORGERIES.

Lee Hung-pui, an expert from the Netherlands Bank, testified to the two notes being forgeries. He said that the colour on the surface was deeper and the design more distinct than in the genuine notes, and the texture was also stiffer, though not so tough as the genuine notes. The back of the forged notes also appeared to be smeared with wax, and the figures were more yellow. The printer's name in the forgeries was also much finer than in the genuine notes.

After further evidence, hearing was adjourned.

SHAME MAY RESTRAIN WHAT LAW DOES NOT PROHIBIT.—Seneeca.

For stealing two packets of cigarettes from a hunchback woman's stall at Western Market a Chinese youth was sent to prison for one month this morning.

Mr. H. Bonnafous, the new French Consul-General, has arrived in Canton from Mukden to take up the post vacated by Mr. L. Eynard who is now on home leave. Before the arrival of Mr. Bonnafous, Dr. Ringenbach was Acting Consul for France.

It being established that a person is allowed to carry 5 taels of Hongkong Government prepared opium, Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning discharged a shop fook who was charged in respect of 3 taels at the Po Tak Wharf. Revenue Officer Grimmer stated defendant should have had a Kan-shan pass-book for the opium.

Bruening Party Next to Go

NAZIS WARN CATHOLIC CENTRE

Berlin, June 28.

One by one, Hitler is suppressing all parties in Germany which may be regarded as rivals of the Nazis, whether or not they pursue a policy of opposition to the Nazi programme.

The week has witnessed the forcible smashing of the Bavarian Peoples Party and the surrender of the National Front.

Hitler, through his Director of Propaganda, Dr. Goebbels, has now issued a warning to the Catholic Centre Party, giving them the same option, surrender or suppression, with its accompaniment, the imprisonment of the leading figures in the Party, which is controlled by the former Chancellor, Dr. Bruening.

GOEBBELS' "ADVICE."

The threat was issued in the course of a vigorous speech by Dr. Goebbels at Stuttgart, when he advised the Catholic Centre Party to dissolve voluntarily if it wanted to avert action by the Government.

He declared: "There is no room in Germany for the Centre Party any more and we would do the Catholic Church a good service by making the Centre Party disappear."

"Our aim," he added, "is the creation of homogeneous National Socialist Germany."

HUMILIATION.

Most humiliating treatment was accorded the ex-Governor of Lower Silesia, a Socialist by the name of Luedemann, while on his way to the concentration camp at Breslau.

Escorted by ten Nazi Brown Shirts, he had to walk to the camp from the police headquarters through thousands of jeering and hissing Nazis. On arrival at the camp, the President of Police at Breslau, Herr Heines, who has served a sentence in gaol for murder, gilded at Luedemann, and said he could now help to pay out his pension for the other prisoners.

Luedemann was then taken to the Government building where he was jeered at by his former subordinates, and finally taken back to the camp and put to work with a spade in the fields.

SHOCK FOR STORES.

Department stores and similar business concerns were struck a heavy blow by the Business Commissioner, Herr Otto Wagner, who has forbidden them to sell goods other than those made by independent factories or artisans.

The object of this is to encourage independent craftsmen and small shopkeepers. The business in which stores are now no longer permitted to engage include sausage making, hair dressing, beauty saloons, banking, tailoring, watch and motor car repairs and furniture-making.

LORD LLOYD ON INDIA

BRITISH POLICY ASSAILED

MR. BALDWIN'S DEFENCE

London, June 29.

Nearly a thousand members of the Central Council of the Conservative Party attended the meeting in London to-day to discuss the constitutional reform proposals of the White Paper on India.

The resolution opposing the policy was proposed by Lord Lloyd and supported by Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Carson.

It was defeated by 838 votes to 356 and the Government attitude was endorsed. Mr. Stanley Baldwin strongly defended the Government's action. He said the policy resulted from the work of all the political parties but he argued that the Conservatives must bear the major responsibility.

The men on the spot had, however, been consulted throughout and the White Paper had been meticulously prepared and had the support of the entire Cabinet.

It had the unanimous support of the Government of India, including the Commander-in-Chief and of the responsible members of the services who had years of experience in India.

POLICY ASSAILED.

Lord Lloyd vigorously assailed the policy which he said provided inadequate safeguards for the welfare, security, peace and contentment of the Indian people.

Mr. Churchill who was constantly interrupted despite appeals for order, declared that the policy would not go through Parliament without the most strenuous resistance and searching criticism and examination by those who thought it to be fraught with grave danger.

MILITARY FUNERAL THIS MORNING

Burial of Private John Cartwright

A victim of acute appendicitis, John Cartwright, aged 25, of the First Battalion, Lincolnshire Regiment, died after an operation at the Military Hospital at Bowen Road yesterday morning. He is survived by his mother, who lives at Tunstall, Staffordshire.

The funeral took place at the Protestant Cemetery, Happy Valley, this morning, with full military honours, and was attended by all available men from the Battalion.

The coffin, draped with the Union Jack, was drawn along on a gun carriage, and as the procession approached the Cemetery gate, the Band and Drums of the Lincolnshire rendered Chopin's Funeral March and the Dead March from Saul.

Major H. St. G. Thoyts, M.C., of the Lincolnshire, was in command. The services at the graveside were performed by the Rev. J. N. Lewis, Bryan, Military Chaplain.

The customary three volleys were fired over the grave, and a party of buglers sounded the Last Post and Reveille.

Wreaths were laid on the grave from the Commanding Officer and other officers and men of the deceased's Battalion, and from the South Wales Borderers and the other units.

FINANCIAL AID FOR NEW FOUNDLAND

British Government to Pay Whole Vote

London, June 28.

Speaking on the supplementary Dominions services vote in connection with the grant in aid amounting to £400,000, of the Government of New Foundland, the Under-Secretary of State for the Dominions, Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, recalled the arrangement which the United Kingdom and Canadian Governments joined in advancing to Newfoundland the money required for the January payment of interest due on the external debt of the Dominion.

Regarding the interest payment due on July 1, the Canadian Government had not found it possible to join in making another advance, and the United Kingdom Government had decided to make the whole advance.

This was an interim arrangement pending the report of a Royal Commission on a long range constructive policy for the Dominion in future.

The vote was approved.

GOVERNMENT PLAN CRITICISED

London, June 28.

At an extremely important meeting of the Conservative Central Committee to-day, an overwhelming majority rejected a resolution which virtually condemned the Government's Indian policy.

The meeting voted after Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill and Mr. G. W. Lloyd, Parliamentary Private Secretary to the Lord President of the Council (Mr. Baldwin), had delivered spirited addresses: There were other speakers both for and against the Government's policy.

Finally, the meeting adopted a motion, with which Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin agreed, reserving its decision until the report of the Joint Select Committee on Indian affairs had been made public and digested.

NOMADS 56 IN

SAYER & BAKER
SAVE THE DAY

KEEN CRICKET

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph. Copyright. Telegraphic Messages. Ordinance, 1911. Received June 29, 8.22 a.m.)

Exeter, June 28.
Although A. C. Beck, the Hongkong Cricket Club bowler took the chief honours in the opening of a two-day match between the Hongkong Nomads and Devon Dumplings which started here today, the Nomads owed it to G. R. Sayer and F. Baker of the Civil Service that they finished only 56 runs in arrears on the first innings.
The close of play scores were:
Devon Dumplings 179 and 10 for 1

H. K. Nomads 123 Batting first, the Dumplings had a difficult time up to lunch counterling the excellent Hongkong attack and they lost four wickets for 48 runs.
After the interval, the Nomads lost their grip on the game, and the Dumplings scored with a fair amount of ease, finally aggregating 179 before the last wicket fell.

SKILFUL BECK.
A. C. Beck was a constant source of worry to the batsmen, and he gave away runs very sparingly.

He was responsible for taking six wickets at a cost of 62 runs.
This is the second success Beck has enjoyed since the tour started. In the first match against the Somerset Stragglers he took 8 for 53.

The Nomads found run-getting an even harder task than wickettaking and half the side were out for less than 50 runs.

SAVE A COLLAPSE.
After this Sayer and Baker scored freely and did much to retrieve a bad position.

Sayer scored 36 before dismissal and Baker had the satisfaction of carrying his bat for a similar score.

Both Richardson and Anderson failed and only Macfarlane with 16 to his credit did anything to help the score along.

The last wicket fell at 123 and the Dumplings started on their second innings, when they lost a wicket for 10 runs before close of play, leaving them 66 runs ahead with nine wickets in hand.

Giants broke even in a double header with Pittsburgh as did Brooklyn with Cincinnati.

Although the Yankees won easily against Detroit, they gained no advantage as Washington Senators, leaders of the American League also scored heavily against Cleveland.

ROUGED KNEES
FOR TENNIS

SUZANNE SETS NEW FASHION

Paris, June 6.

Suzanne Lenglen suggests that women tennis player should rouge their knees.

She followed her own suggestion and appeared with dabs of rouge on her knees in a practice match against Helen Jacobs, the American, in Paris.

"I decided this spring there was no reason why women should look like scarecrows on the courts," she said. "Since most of us frankly use make-up before a gallery of spectators, why shouldn't we do something about our knees?
On the courts they are as much in evidence as our faces."

"I don't think women players consider their looks sufficiently.
Even a poet won't rhapsodise over a feminine knee. But we don't need to look like freaks. Certainly judicious rouge on the knees would make us less bizarre in appearance."

CAR DASH FROM

London, June 6.

Miss Violet Webb, the international hurdler, won two championships in similar events yesterday.

She won the Southern Counties 80 metres hurdles at Brentwood, equalling the British record with 12 seconds, and then, travelling by fast car, went on to the contest between the North, South and Midlands at St. Albans and came in first there.

In her heat she again equalled the British record and the final she won in 12 1/5 seconds.

The high jump was almost as exciting. Miss Mary Milne, the international jumper and Miss N.
Carrington, for the South tied twice at 5ft. 0 1/2 inch while Miss Okell the Northern Champion and Miss Halfall tied for third place.

The South won with 67 points,
North having 47 and the Midlands 17.

HISTORY OF THE IOWA FARMS

THE POST WAR BOOM

LONG STRUGGLE

Des Moines, Iowa. Behind the uprising of farmers which brought troops and martial law recently into several North-western Iowa counties is a story of a post-war land price boom and 5 years of efforts to slow the high speed agricultural machine of the world war days down to a pace approximating consumption demands.

Farm prices for choice Iowa land soared to $40, $60 and even more acre after the war. With loose credit and plentiful money, expansion was the watchword and farm owners mortgaged their property as they sought to extend their holdings and to install the latest farm machinery.

TUBERCULOSIS TESTS. On the rush that received impetus from the stock market boom agriculture borrowed on the strength of 4-5 a bushel corn and corresponding prices for other commodities.

The reckoning came with the steady drop in prices which forced farmers to pay off these obligations with receipts from corn sold at as low as 5d, a bushel.

Unrest developed. Organized protest came in 1931 when farmers massed to prevent testing of cattle for tuberculosis. National guardsmen were sent to enforce the tests.

Next came the "farm strike" aimed directly at low prices. Their mortgages were pending said the farmers and contended that they could not pay because of depleted incomes so they went on to the highways as pickets to prevent movement of commodities to market until prices reached a point that assured cost of production plus a reasonable profit. Outbreaks of violence followed but the forcible prevention of farmers from selling their products gradually died out after having spread to Nebraska, Minnesota, South Dakota and other states.

FORCING UP PRICES.

Out of this movement rose the "Farmers Holiday Association," its aim being to withhold products voluntarily from the towns in order to force a rise in prices.

As the mortgage situation became more acute, the Association organized "Councils of Defense" in many countries to work out agreements between creditor and debtor.

In some cases conciliation was effective, but in others foreclosure actions were started. At one place an attorney representing a foreclosing insurance company, was dragged from the court house steps as he offered a bid at a forced sale, and forced to make a higher offer on pain of lynching.

VIRTUAL MORATORIUM.

Similar movements by farmers occurred in other parts of the

"STUNT" DANCES

London.

Both the Prince of Wales and Prince George like dancing and you can often see one or the other around midnight in one of the small and smart restaurants near Piccadilly. And the London hostesses follow their example.

The private dances are frequent and fashionable. The public dances are ingenious and spectacular.

When people want to arrange a public ball in aid of a charity, they do not nowadays think it enough to hire a ballroom and a band and sell the two-guinea tickets to all their friends. No, they have to think of extra diversions, as well.

AFEW STUNTS.

And some of the "stunts" that London charity hostesses devise would do credit to any professional showman. Here are three of the latest ideas:

The Debutantes' Ball: This was organised by Lady Charles Cavendish (who used to be Adele Astaire, the musical comedy dancer) and was supposed to give Londoners a chance to "look-over" the season's newcomers. Prince George was there.

The Flower Ball: Planned by the Marchioness of Carlsbrooke, this one had two main attractions: a "race" round the ball-room by Covent-Garden porters carrying their baskets, and a display in which six pretty girls represented "living flowers."

The Famous Film Memories Ball: The attraction here was "a stage made as a cinema screen on which films old and new were recalled."

This last ball proved the most intriguing of all. Who could resist the daughter of the Brazilian Ambassador impersonating Dolores del Rio or Lady Melchett turning herself into Greth Garbo?—Reuter.

FIGHTING FLOOD

$600,000 VOTE FOR EMERGENCIES

Nanking, June 28. The Central Political Council met to-day, and foremost in its weighty agenda the consideration of steps for the combating of floods was undertaken.

The Council voted for the appropriation of $600,000 for emergency measures in connexion with the flood menace.

Latest reports, considered by the Council, indicated that the immediate danger of serious flooding along the Yangtze River course has considerably abated.

State, forcing frequent postponements of foreclosure sales. Meanwhile unpaid taxes were piling up and county treasurers found it necessary to call sales to collect the delinquent levies. The sales were jammed with tight-lipped farmers who refused to make a single bid. After frequent postponements, the Iowa State Legislature met and postponed delinquent tax sales until December 1, 1933.

Among other legislative moves was the passage of laws declaring a virtual moratorium on mortgage foreclosures in Iowa until March 1, 1935.

The outbreak which led to the recent calling of troops resulted in a Judge began consideration of cases brought by insurance companies and land banks testing the validity of the moratorium laws. Irate farmers invaded the court, dragged the Judge from his bench and threatened to hang him unless he held the laws constitutional.—Reuter.

vicious day beat Von Kehring, the Hungarian, made his exit when he ran up against Jack Crawford, the Australian "ace." But the Frenchman strove desperately hard and nearly captured the third set.

LONG DUEL.

J. Condon, the South African Davis Cup player sustained a dramatic defeat when he fell, a victim to Steadman, a New Zealand nominee.

The match went the full distance and was featured by its "no quarter" atmosphere. Steadman had to concede the first set at the 20th game, but fought back to win the second and third. Condon refused to give up and pushed home a lead to win the fourth set at 7-5, but the effort proved too much and Steadman broke through in the fifth set at the tenth game.

COCHET HARD PRESSED.

Henri Cochet, who has had a very comfortable passage so far, nearly came a cropper to C. L. Burwell, the Oxford "Blue" in his third round tie to-day.

The Frenchman lost the first set at 6-2, recovered to win the succeeding two sets and then, when everybody expected him to go out on the customary three sets to one, Burwell produced a crop of dazzling strokes which gave him the fourth at 7-5.

The strain upon Burwell was sufficient to make him give over the initiative to Cochet, and the French wizard succeeded in going to his points after losing three games.

DOUBLES MATCHES.

A highly satisfactory British success was the victory of Dr. J. C. Gregory and F. H. D. Wilde over Ito and Miki, the Japanese combination.

The Englishmen had the game in their pockets for most of the time, the only period in which they had to take a back seat being in the third set.

G. P. Hughes and Mrs. Helen Willis Moody, one of the much fancied couples for the Mixed Doubles title scored an easy and impressive second round win against E. R. Avory and Mrs. Strawson, losing only five games in two sets.

WOMEN INVADE THE CLUBS

ST. JAMES'S SUCCUMBS TO POPULAR DEMAND

London.

Every club in London will be open to women soon.

The Devonshire, the Junior Constitutional, the Reform, the Royal Aero Club—all these have recently opened their doors to women. And now the St. James's Club in Piccadilly, the club of diplomats and high politicians, has announced that henceforth women will be allowed to lunch as guests of members in the Coffee Room, on Sundays only.

But the members feel that this is only the thin end of the wedge. When the news was broken gently to one of them, sitting under the painted ceiling, decorated by a famous artist of the last century, he exclaimed angrily: "Propose that I shall resign!"

"No, will have to go to the Athenaeum or the Marlborough."

London, June 28.

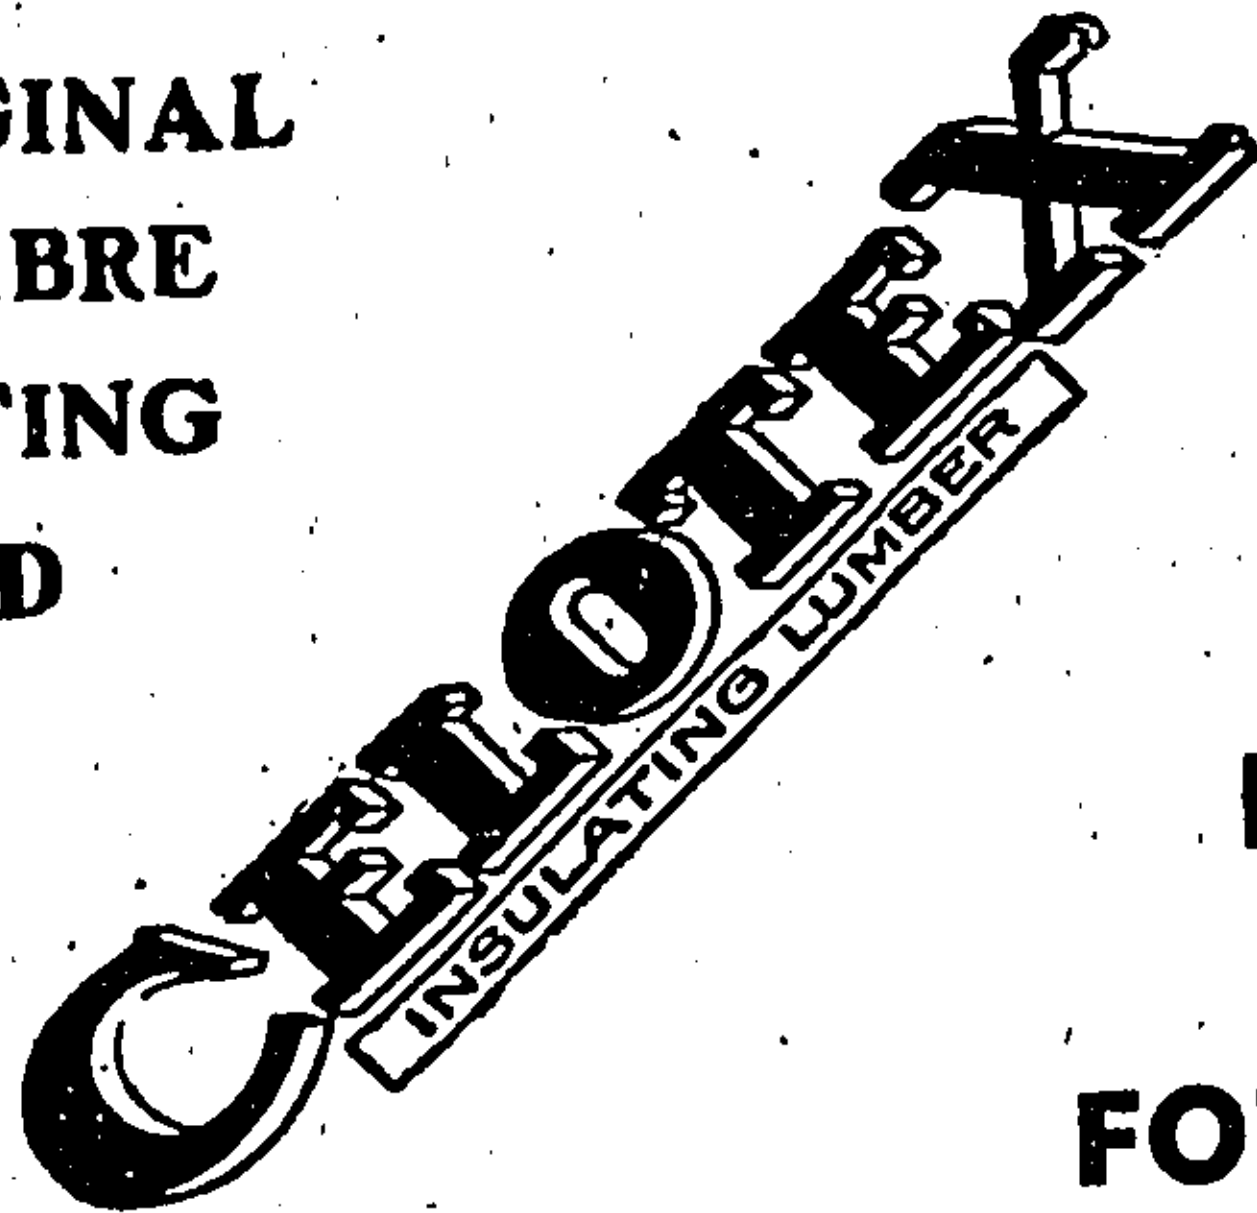

The Austrian Finance Minister, Herr Buresch, and the Minister of the Interior, Herr Schumy, have arrived in London, seeking large loans to assist in the strengthening of Austria's exchange.

Herr Buresch, interviewed, declared that he was sanguine of results. He had set out upon his mission anticipating a bargain for his Government. He wished, he said, to obtain from Great Britain 100,000,000 schillings, the same sum from France, 30,000,000 from Italy, 8,000,000 from Switzerland, 6,000,000 from Belgium and 3,000,000 from Holland.

The entire proceeds of the loan, he said, would be devoted to strengthening the exchange.—Reuter.

They are still adamant in their refusal to admit women. And so in the Press Club, where you can get a drink far into the night.—Reuter.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Those who have been hoping and praying for another "Sunshine Susto", will find their wishes more than adequately met in "Marry Me", the new Renate Muller picture, which Wilhelm Thiele directed, and which will be shown at the King's Theatre next Sunday.

It is an engaging story (the main venue is a gramophone factory) which "Marry Me" tells, with the expert assistance of those three monarchs of laughter, Harry Green, George Robey, and Billy Caryl and of course the charming Renate Muller herself, who is supported by Ian Hunter, Maurice Evans, Charles Hawtrey, and Viola Lyel.

It is the story of a pretty gramophone recordist who is in love with a fellow employee (Ian Hunter). The young gentleman, head of a bachelor household of three brothers, is slow to realise Renate's affection for him, and hankers after "a rich marriage." He is unaware that Renate, and that, having sought the advice of her "boss", she is about to bring football strategy to bear upon her matrimonial aspirations. How she secures the elusive young gentleman at last; how she enlists the services of a matrimonial agency in bringing Romeo to heel, makes up a story that is as melodious as it is funny.

"A Lady's Profession"

Madame Racketeer has returned to the screen in a new racket of giggle-water and laughing-gas in "A Lady's Profession," with Allison Skipworth, Roland Young, and Sari Maritza, at the Queen's.

Brittle-humour, infectious laughter wriggle through the story as Miss Skipworth, in the role of a British lady, leaves the safety of her ancestral castle to solve the problems of an impoverished nobleman who persists in leaping from scrape to scrape. Roland Young is excellent to the nit-wit Englishman. Sari Maritza and Kent Taylor, the new Paramount find, play the romantic leads, while the irrepressible comics, Roscoe Karns and Warren Hymer, complete the laugh sextette.

It's one of those delightful comedies that Paramount does so well, full of quips and sallies that prance aside by side from start to finish. Joyously entertaining, you'll like the cast of screen experts and the manner in which they interpret the humour.

"Secrets of the French Police"

Murders, master detectives, hypnotism, abductions, and diabolically plotted "accidental" deaths, all spaced at breath-taking tempo, make "Secrets of the French Police" one of the best pictures of its kind ever screened or written. It is at the Central Theatre to-day. As taken from the memoirs of H. Ashton Wolfe, and combined with Samuel Ornitz's amazing story, "The Lost Empress", this RKO-Radio Picture offers all the thrills possible to pack into an hour and a half of screen entertainment.

Gwili Andre, as the lovely Paris flower girl who is abducted by hypnotized, and presented as the Missing Princess Annastasia of Russia, fulfils all the promise she revealed in her early pictures. Gwili Andre is considered by many to be the most beautiful woman on the screen to-day. A newcomer makes his bow in "Secrets of the French Police." He is John Warburton, a handsome and able young leading man from England. Radio signed him to a five year contract as a result of his work opposite Miss Andre. That fact is adequate comment on his appearance and his abilities.

HELL BELOW

EAT AT Jimmy's
1, D'Arville Street.

Religious Film.

On Sunday morning at 11 a.m. the film showing the Exposition of the body of St. Francis Xavier will be screened at the Oriental Theatre (for one show only) which is definitely the last in Hongkong as Australia and America are anxiously waiting to see this interesting film and to hear Joan Armstrong personally give her account of all that happened at Goa in 1532, and also to explain her cure and conversion. This film will be shown under the kind patronage and in the presence of His Lordship Rev. H. Valtorta. Booking is open at Anderson's.

"The Painted Women"

Cocoanut palms, bending over a pounding surf—coral reefs ringing the rocky islets—outrigger canoes—gaily coloured fish—marvellous sunsets—the haunting echoes of a Polynesian song across the water under a tropic moon—these make up more of the glamour and romance of the South Sea background of the new Fox picture, "The Painted Women" which opens at the King's Theatre shortly, with Spencer Tracy and Peggy Shannon in the leading roles. The daring work of the native pearl divers, a thrilling undersea battle with a giant octopus and the tempestuous conflict of three men over the heart of one girl, who hated all men, are said to give the film its sensational flair of drama. The strong cast which supports Tracy and Miss Shannon includes William (Stage) Boyd, Irving Pichel, Raoul Roulien, Herbert Mundin and Leeka Winters. John Blystone directed the production.

BRIDGE

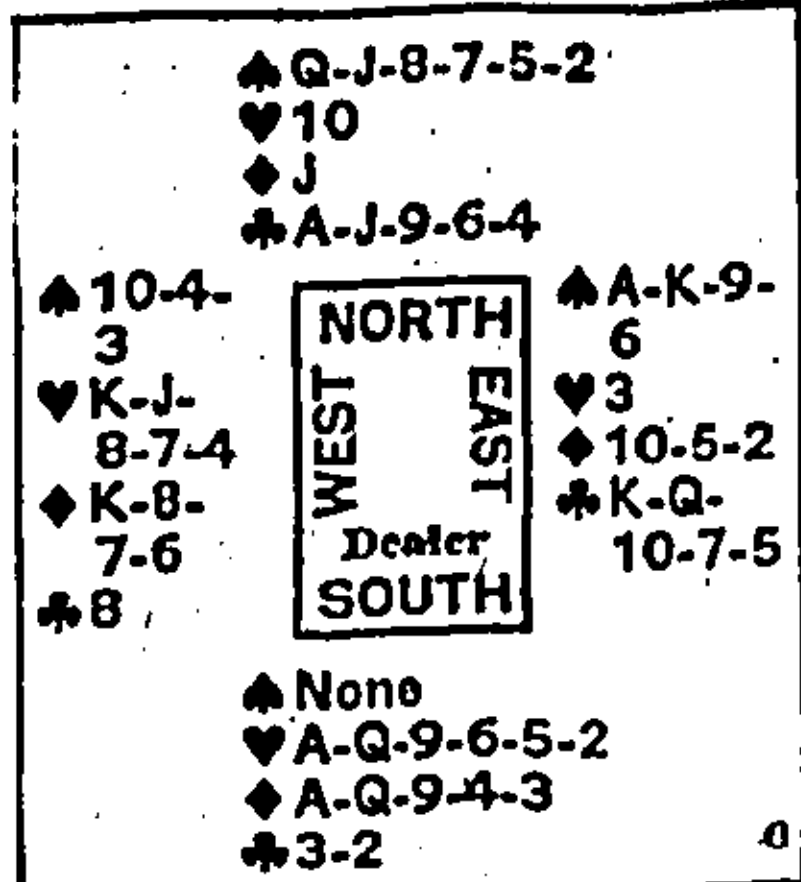

By W. E. McKenney

Generally when a person picks up a hand containing two good suits, he immediately starts to plan on going places with the hand. However, I believe that the first thought that should come to your mind when you pick up a hand containing a freak distribution should be: "Is this hand apt to be a misfit?"

How do you find this out?

Always remember that the first thing to do is to find the safety of a hand. When you and your partner are bidding back and forth showing different suits, and you can't agree on a suit, you know there is no safety in that hand, and therefore it must be a misfit.

The following hand was recently dealt in a tournament, and a number of North and South players who were vulnerable went down anywhere from 900 to 1,300 points on this board. But really, the hand should not get you into any serious trouble.

The Bidding

South should open the bidding with one heart. North will bid a spade. East is not going to interfere with that, and South should bid two diamonds, a highly constructive bid which practically forces his partner to bid again.

West will pass the two diamonds. North should now realize that he and his partner have shown three suits and have not found the safety of the hand as yet. To bid clubs might force his partner to try to play the hand at no trump. He should forget all about the club suit and immediately try to sign the hand off with a bid of two spades.

East should pass. Of course South cannot play the hand at spades—he holds a six and a five card suit. South's proper response now is three hearts—to bid three diamonds might encourage further bidding, but with this type of a hand he definitely wishes to show partner that the hand must be played at one of his suits.

By bidding the higher ranking suits first, he says, "If you are short-suited in both of my suits, I

UNSUSPECTED
CONSTIPATION

Nine out of ten of us—whether we know it or not—are martyrs to partial constipation. For it is a fact that an overloaded and neglected food canal will quickly and inevitably lead to a multitude of ills, the true cause of which we rarely recognise. The sole purpose of Eno's 'Fruit Salt' is to check this evil—safely and harmlessly. Acting in the same way as those natural salts which should be—but are not—present in modern diet, Eno gets rid of all waste matter before it has time to stagnate and become poisonous. Take Eno first thing every morning.
